PREFACE.

From necessity, as well as from a regard to the true design of the work, the following record is more genealogical than historical. Little else need be said of most persons than to specify the dates of their birth, marriage and death; their parentage, their children, their removals and places of residence, and their employments. The peculiar interest, however, which every family must feel with respect to its earliest progenitors, rendered it proper that our account should embrace everything which could be found in any quarter relating to John Wing of Sandwich, and his immediate connections. Those, also, who have been especially distinguished in public, social or commercial life, might naturally be expected to have a more particular notice. After our best efforts, very little material for such a purpose has come to hand, and every item thus recovered has been recorded which was thought to have any possible interest to their descendants.

The arrangement which has been followed combines, to some extent, both methods of division—by generations, and by direct lineage. The three principal branches, which sprung from the original progenitor through his three sons, have been kept distinct through all the generations. Minuter divisions, according to widely separated localities, or minor families, would have been difficult and perplexing. By means of the index, the numbers at the head of each paragraph and the numbers included in parentheses, each branch of the family can be easily traced.

The chasms, which are obvious to every reader, might possibly have been filled up by more protracted inquiries; but neither the writer, nor any one with whom he is acquainted, is likely to give to such a work the needful time and labor. With respect to those errors or defects which will doubtless be found in the work, the writer here gives notice that he intends to have an interleaved copy bound up, in which he will record all suggestions regarding them which may be brought to his notice. Another edition of the present work may not be called for during his lifetime, but such a volume will be of some convenience to those who, we may be sure, will hereafter make inquiries on the subject.

The 5th of June, 1882, will be the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the arrival of John Wing and his sons at Boston; and although it may be too much to hope that any large number of his descendants will then assemble at Sandwich to revive historical recollections, to collect materials for a more perfect family record, and to promote a common family spirit, it would be an appropriate occasion for the exchange of epistolary greetings, and for the contribution of much additional history.

A few copies with a larger margin to the pages have been issued, in compliance with the request of some correspondents who wish for space on which to record their corrections and additions. The portraits were inserted at the suggestion, and principally through the efforts of Lueius B. Wing, of Newark, Ohio, whose encouragement and counsel have been freely bestowed from the commencement and through the entire progress of the work. The map, which will be of assistance in tracing the settlements of the earlier generations, was generously contributed by the corporation whose name it bears. The coat of arms, which we have thought worthy of being engraved and inserted in its proper place, was obtained from England by H. F. Wing, Esq., of Grafton, Mass., and purports to be, "Arms of Wing, as borne by Sir Theodore Wing, Lord Warden of the Wastes and Liveries to King Henry VII." That there was such an official in the Court of that monarch, we learn from more than one history of the time.

It was perhaps a rash moment for the writer when he exchanged his original plan of editing a diminutive pamphlet, in which a genealogy and brief notice might be given of the descendants of John Wing of Conway, for a volume embracing the entire family of the Wings in America. He had then no distinct conception of the labyrinth through which he would have to seek his way. It was not, indeed, very difficult to trace with tolerable clearness the lineages of the first four or five generations, for they were nearly all confined to a few towns in Southeastern Massachusetts, where all births, marriages and deaths were to be found in the public records. But after the Revolution, when their children wandered off to the Province of Maine, Western Massachusetts, Vermont, and the Middle and Western States, until there is scarcely a State or Territory of the American Union in which they are not distributed, there were few such sources of information. In the midst of the activities and privations of frontier life, and sharing in the independent spirit which characterizes our countrymen generally, little was thought of ancestors; and hence even the records of individual families were frequently neglected. Invitations had to be sent to all whose names and residences could be ascertained, that they would report whatever they knew of their own family connections, and of others bearing the name. It soon became evident that the time had come for such an effort, and that many were prepared to appreciate its importance. A large amount of materials was returned, but the accounts were often so disconnected with each other, and with any part of the main stock of the family, that one of a much stouter heart might well have been dismayed. Very few beyond those living around the original seats of the first immigrants could give an intelligible account of their progenitors beyond their immediate parents, or, at best, their grandparents, and no small amount of patience and discrimination were requisite for finding the exact position of each one in the genealogical chain. The principal difficulty was, of course, in carrying each account over the fifth and sixth generations. We were obliged sometimes to hazard conjectures where only a slight hint of a name or a date was given to guide us, and we shall not be surprised to learn that here especially mistakes have been committed. We can only say that we have taken much pains to avoid them; that we have not assumed to know with confidence where our way was not clear, and that an entire chapter has been given to such disconnected branches as could not be located with certainty in the parent tree.

It would not be desirable, even if it were sure to be agreeable to those concerned, were we to make acknowledgments in this place of our obligations to all who have contributed valuable aid in this work. Where their contributions extended no further than the records of their immediate connections, their names may be easily inferred from the details which are given. Among those, however, who have gone considerably beyond this, we cannot refrain from mentioning Dr. Henry Russell, of Sandwich; Josiah Paine, the editor of the Harwich Independent; Dr. A. W. Holden and Mrs. Halsey R. Wing, of Glen's Falls; G. J. Wing, of Wayne; Paul and Edward Wing, of North Fairfield, and Lewis M. Wing, of North Livermore, in the State of Maine; Charles T. Wing, of New York City; Henry F. Wing, of Brooklyn, and Christina Wing, of Albany, in the State of New York; and E. Darwin Wing, of Maryville, Missouri. Among the books which have been of use may be mentioned: Freeman's History of Cape Cod, 2 vols.; Farmer's Register of N. E. Families; The N. E. Genealogical and Historical Register, 45 vols.; Holden's History of Queensbury (Glen's Falls); Walker's History of Old Plymouth; The Whitney Family, 2 vols.; Bond's Genealogies of Watertown; Winsor's History of Duxbury; The Winslow Family, by D. D. and Frances K. Holton; History of Lynn, by Alonzo Lewis and J. R. Newhall; Thompson's History of Montpelier, Vt.; History of Grafton, Mass., and Holland's History of Western Massachusetts.

The Index contains the names of all persons known to have been connected with the family. Of those which are followed by a reference to only one page, nothing is recorded except their parentage, and in some instances their deaths. It is divided into three parts; the first contains the christian names of all descendants of John Wing, of Sandwich, or Robert Wing, of Boston; the second contains the names of all who have been connected with the family by marriage, and the third contains the names of all descendants bearing other names than that of Wing.

INTRODUCTION.

For a man of cultivated and refined taste, it must seem appropriate for him to take a special interest in the history of his own family. In most families will be found some personages or incidents, the recollection of which will awaken such a one to a higher self-respect and emulation. There need be nothing improper in such a result. If we should esteem virtue and good deeds in ourselves or others, why not value it in our families? This is a very different thing from an aristocratical pride, which thinks only of the external advantages which a royal patent can bestow. It has reference to that real excellence which is often seen to be specially developed in some families. God has himself recognized the law by which good or bad influences descend, not merely through three or four but through a thousand generations. Every one now living has within himself forces and qualities which make him differ from all around him, but which have perhaps, come down from remote ancestors. Whether these are due to those better habits and training, which are maintained in certain families, and through which a special divine arrangement works through natural laws, or to a peculiar physical organization, the reality has always been acknowledged, and never more emphatically than in the decisions of advanced science at the present day. The most skeptical investigators of natural or divine laws are obliged to admit that there are influences silently operating in every life which are independent of the individual will. They may not impair any one's moral freedom, but only prescribe limits within which his powers have their best action, and they naturally suggest the proper objects of his ambition. They open to each one the prospect of reaching higher ground than was possible to his predecessors, inasmuch as he is the legitimate heir of all that they have been or done.

But even those families in whose history nothing extraordinary may be discoverable, have yet abundant motive for gathering and studying their earlier records. The humblest object becomes more interesting when its true nature and history are known, and the most insignificant animal will be looked upon as more valuable when its pedigree can be traced to some celebrated stock. Who, then, can believe that human beings are unaffected by the same law? Ought any one to be entirely indifferent to the channels in which his own blood has come to him? Whether it has flowed down in the veins of nobles or peasants, whether he has a reason before his fellow-men for honest pride in the exploits or for satisfaction with the mere respectability of his ancestors he surely has ground for desiring to know for himself what are his connections with the past. But irrespective of all reference to the utility of such knowledge, there is an instinct in all right minds which constrains them to such an interest. A part of the same respect and love which every true man feels for the father and mother who bore him is carried back to the whole line of his progenitors. The pleasure which most persons take in such studies springs therefore from one of the profoundest and most useful of human instincts. It deserves encouragement, among all classes of society. There is nothing to make it more appropriate for the rich than for the poor. An honored and virtuous ancestry is quite as much a source of pride to such as have no other inheritance, as to those who glory in large ancestral titles and estates. And it may be as powerful an incentive so to live as to command the veneration and esteem of coming generations. There may be some exaggeration, but there is truth in the motto of the American College of

Heraldry, "He who careth not whence he came, careth little whither he goeth."

Americans have sometimes been tempted to speak contemptuously of family descent and family history. An interest in such matters has not unfrequently been reproached as if it were inconsistent with republican simplicity. If what we have said be true it is inconsistent only with an arrogation to one's self of those titles which come from royal or aristocratic prescription. The time is coming, and has already begun, when many must take a pure delight in recollecting the part which those dear to them took, not only in establishing our national independence but in maintaining our national unity. "Beyond the stimulus which the desire of distinction gives to those who are rising in the world there is an important benefit derived from the sentiment of family antiquity, in the tendency which it has to unite and hold together the mass of those families which have a stake in the country for their mutual preservation. Those who look upon the nation as composed of its honorable and patriotic families, will feel bound together by a sacred tie, and communities will no longer be regarded as an incongruous mass of adventurers, but as a brotherhood animated by a kindred spirit."

Let us bring to test these suggestions by noticing the associations connected with the contemplation of a family tree. There may, or there may not be branches in that tree which have formed a shadow for a nation or a world; but for every one who is a branch in that tree, however insignificant, it will have an illumination to which he cannot be indifferent. As he traces the limbs in various directions, his sympathies will be likely to be drawn forth to a larger circle, his consciousness of capabilities will be deepened by the suggestion of what his own flesh and blood has accomplished, and a respect for a common association will prompt to a higher style of living. He can hardly fail to have his scheme of life enlarged when he becomes conscious of a community animated by "one blood." He will begin to regard himself, not as a mere accretion upon a dead mass, but as a member of an organism pervaded by a life leaving no minute part without a common sympathy. For want of such a sentiment many a family has never attained its appropriate character and position.

In the following history an attempt has been made to collect all that can now be known of a single family. The object was not to obtain materials for family pride, since these were not supposed to exist, but to satisfy a simple desire for information. Two or three individuals had come into possession of genealogical records and traditions which were esteemed worthy, at least, of preservation. The original design was much more limited than it has since become, and embraced only a single branch of the family bearing the name. But with correspondence, materials unexpectedly accumulated, until the hope was indulged that all the branches of the family in America might be brought into outline and greater or less distinctness of representation. In this first attempt there must, of course, be considerable defect. Some individuals and groups of persons have not been discovered whom it would have been desirable to embrace in it, and others of whom we desired to know more have resisted all our importunities to afford us the needful information. A postponement of the publication might, perhaps, have secured greater completeness, but, on the other hand, might have endangered the publication of what we have collected. On the whole, we have yielded to the pressure for delay until a considerable degree of completeness has been secured, but not so far as entirely to disappoint the reasonable expectations of the original projectors.

More were found able and ready to co-operate in the work than we anticipated at the beginning. Persons of intelligence have been brought into correspondence who delighted in the task, and have spared no pains to contribute as much material as possible. In some instances there are discrepancies, and no doubt inaccuracies, arising not always from the fault of the compiler, but sometimes from inconsistencies in his authorities. He has done his best to relieve the monotony of the details by interesting and characteristic anecdotes, but in consequence of the absolute want of epistolary relics and private papers which are sometimes found in literary families, and the necessary confinement to the use of public records of the towns or churches where each branch of the family resided, he had often no alternative but to present a simple array of names and dates. And yet a careful reader will discover some prominent characteristics which appear to have belonged to the family in all its generations and branches. From the first landing on the American shore to the present time a disposition has been exhibited to take sides with the oppressed, and in favor of the utmost freedom in civil and religious affairs. At an early period two main branches of the family were determined by this peculiarity in their social and ecclesiastical relations for all subsequent time. Probably not one of the connection has ever been found giving his support to men or measures which he regarded as opposed to popular liberty or to the freest expression of opinion. Such a liberty may not necessarily imply the highest and purest exercise of man's best powers; but, ordinarily, it is favorable to their development and profitable action. We have, therefore, no regrets when we think it possible that a better consciousness of this characteristic trait may be promoted by the present work, and so may have some useful bearing upon the general progress. Our record may seem little more than a genealogical catalogue or a collection of monumental inscriptions, telling how,

“One generation comes,
Another goes and mingles with the dust.
And thus we come and go, and come and go,
Each for a little moment filling up
Some little space. And thus we disappear
In quick succession. And it shall be so,
Till time in one vast perpetuity
Be swallowed up,”— and yet the thoughtful mind finds new occasion for believing what revelation and science agree in representing as the scienza nuda of all true history, that each generation is moving into a brighter light and a more perfect, divine kingdom.

II. THE WINGS IN ENGLAND.

A family bearing the name of “Winge,” about 1570, went from Wales and settled at Great Ponton, near Grantham, in Lincolnshire, England. From this source were derived several generations, who resided in the neighboring parish of North Luffenham, in Rutlandshire. A minister of the name of John Wing was pastor of an English congregation in Flushing, in the Island of Walcheren, Province of Zealand, in Holland, and was the author of a number of religious publications.* During the latter part of the seventeenth century, flourished a celebrated astronomer named Vincent Wing. As the science of Astronomy at that period was studied principally for its practical bearing upon that of Astrology, he was more known for his relations to the latter science.* He resided in the county of Rutland, and appears to have been a learned man and a prolific writer. A quarto volume entitled, "A Brief Relation of the Life and Death of the Late Famous Mathematician and Astrologer, Vincent Wing," was published by John Gadbury, at London, in 1670. His grandson, Tycho Wing, born at Pickworth, Rutlandshire, and died April 16, 1750, was also distinguished in the same kind of literature. Indeed, the astronomical and mathematical sciences appear to have been favorite studies in this branch of the family, for we have notices of two other publications on the subject by "John Wing. Philomath," in 1693-9,† and for a long succession of years "Wing's Almanac" was one of the most popular annuals in London. The monopoly of the trade of almanacs was granted, by James First, to the Universities and the Company of Stationers in London, and scarcely any names have been held in higher honor by the latter society than those of Vincent and Tycho Wing. Their works and their likenesses are preserved with much respect, and their authority is quoted not unfrequently at the present time in some departments of science cultivated by that company. The Astronomia Britannica contained an engraved likeness of the author, from which a descendant has had a full length bust wrought in terra cotta by Bashfield, of Stamford, which was exhibited and attracted much attention at the International Exhibition in London. His portrait, at Stationers' Hall, London, "represents him with very lively and expressive features, which are well painted with considerable warmth of coloring, his right hand resting on a celestial sphere, his collar open and a loose drapery over his shoulders." There are numerous other works, said to be found in the British Museum, by persons bearing the name of Wing.* The "Clergy List" mentions a number of clergymen of the Establishment, and the London Directory for the present year contains the names of several persons in the legal profession bearing the same family designation. William Wing, Esq., a gentleman who, by correspondence, has shown a lively interest in the present history, is the son of the late Rev. William Wing, Rector of Stibbington, Hunts, and perpetual Curate of Sutton St. Edmund, Lincolnshire, and has been for many years a magistrate at Market Overton, Oakham, Rutlandshire.† We have, as yet, been unable to trace the history of the family in England either before or after the emigration of the American branch, but a number of indications render it

†This Rev. William Wing died in 1867. He married Anne, the daughter of the late William Margetts, of Huntingdon, who died March 15, 1880. The son, William, married first, in 1823, Jane, the daughter of Kingsman Foster, Rector of Dowsby, Lincolnshire, who probable that most if not all bearing the name have a connection with the original company above mentioned, which went, nearly 300 years since, from Wales to the central counties of England.

III. COAT OF ARMS.

In Sir John Bernard Burke's "Encyclopædia, or General Armory of England, Scotland and Ireland," we find what purports to be "The Wing Armour. County of Rutland." The heraldic description accompanying it is: "ARMS.—Per pale, argent and vert—a maunch counter-changed. CREST.—A maunch per pale, argent and vert, between two wings or." In common language "arms" signifies the devices borne on shields or coat armor, and in the present instance they were of the class of concession, granted or permitted by sovereigns to individuals which, in the next generation, became hereditary, and were borne formerly on the mantle or surcoat (hence the phrase coat-of-arms) or more recently on carriages and articles of furniture. In our description the arms and crest are given. The arms were the figures or charge which was pictured on a shield. The phrase "per pale" (from palus, a stake,) signifies that the field or charge is divided into two equal parts by a perpendicular line, with died in 1860; then in 1861 Julia Augusta, youngest daughter of the late John Baker Sladen, of Ripple Court, Kent. He is a Magistrate for Rutland County (High Sheriff in 1866), at Market Overton, Oakham. His son, William Hinman, is now a student at Clare Hall, Cambridge, where his father, his grandfather and his great-grandfather were educated before him. In a "List of Pedigrees contained in William Paver's Consolidated Visitation of Yorkshire," the name of Winge is given, but it is at the same time said that "the generation terminated in that region between 1584 and 1612."

a different field on each side of it. It is then said to be divided (or party) per pale. "Argent and vert" are the colors in which the field or the figures are depicted. They were designated either by "metals or colors." In the present instance the metal was argent or silver (white), and the color was vert or green. The metals and colors are usually depicted in a drawing or engraving by lines or dots; and in our engraving the silver is, according to the rule, plain, and the green is represented by diagonal lines from the right corner (the upper corner on the left of the reader) down to the opposite base corner. The left half of the shield is covered with lines to signify its green color, and diapered with small figures which have no signification but to relieve the monotony of so much surface. "A maunch" is a sort of old-fashioned sleeve with long-hanging ends; in our engraving it is the central figure, extending on both sides of the pale, "Counter-changed" signifies that the field is of two tinctures, metal and color; and that the charge or figure depicted upon it partakes of both; the part of the figure which is of metal lying upon the color, and the part which is of color lying upon the metal (since no metal was ever allowed to be placed upon metal or color upon color). The "Crest" (from the Latin crista a comb or tuft), which was worn usually on the top of the helmet, is in the present case "a maunch per pale, argent and vert, between two wings or—i. e. a sleeve, as in the shield, between two wings, which are of gold metal (yellow, represented in the engraving by dots). The dexter end of the sleeve has a tassel pendant, in or (gold metal).

Between the lower arms and the upper crest, the artist has presented us with the "wreath" (bandeau or torse), which was usually worn on the helmet, between it and the crest, supporting the latter. It was composed of two cords of silk or cloth twisted together, the one tinctured of the principal metal (in this case silver argent or white), and the other of the principal color (vert or green), as in the arms. Frequently a scroll was added to or put around the armor, on which was inscribed a motto or sentence which expressed the sentiment the family more especially cherished. It was no essential part of the armor, and often the different branches or individuals of a family had different mottoes.* The picture from which our engraving was taken agrees in all essential parts with the one described in Burke, and in the possession of the family in Rutland county, England, for something like three centuries. It is given here not because we attach much importance to such distinctions, but simply as a matter of historical interest. We rather sympathize with the spirit of modern democracy, which casts aside all the insignia of mere prerogative or caste. The character of each individual must be his only true emblazonry. And yet with all our republican simplicity there has sprung up of late in this country no small interest in hunting up those family escutcheons, and many have been imposed upon by a class of pretended "heralds." who have invented them to order. We have supposed that the book to which we have referred, and the circumstances in which the coat-of-arms we have described has come to our notice, were a sufficient guarantee of its genuineness.

*Our engraving was made from a picture in the possession of Henry F. Wing, of Grafton, Mass., and which has the motto "Tempus fugit." Another in the possession of the family of the late Hon. W. Wing, of Monroe, Michigan, has the inscription, "Tout pour Dieu et ma patrie." As neither of these mottoes have much significance we have omitted them.

IV. PERIOD OF FIRST IMMIGRATION.

The first emigrants to America bearing the name of Wing, like nearly all the New England colonists of that period, belonged to that portion of the English nation which began, near the close of the sixteenth century, to be called Puritans, because they contended that all civil and ecclesiastical affairs, as well as religious doctrines, should be strictly conformed to Scriptural models, and to the principles of modern liberty. They should, however, be distinguished from that portion of the same party which had settled at Plymouth, and which has usually borne the more specific appellation of "The Pilgrims," because they had for conscience' sake forsaken their native land, had sojourned for several years in the Low Countries, and had finally found a home on the shore of Massachusetts Bay, thirty-seven miles south of the present city of Boston. The two colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay were for many years distinct jurisdictions. The former commenced their settlement (1620) eight years before the latter (1628), and for the first ten years were, for some reason, unable to obtain a royal charter, being organized under the authority of a commercial association, which, however, seemed to have very little zeal for its worldly prosperity. The emigrants also, though composed of some of the most enlightened and energetic men of the age, were less anxious to increase their numbers or their wealth than to provide for their spiritual harmony and edification. They had also been much impoverished by the necessities of a foreign pilgrimage, by repeatedly baffled and expensive attempts to embark for America, by the severities of a long voyage on the ocean, and by the hardships, famines, drouths and sicknesses of their first settlement in the wilderness.

Only three sparsely settled towns, viz : Plymouth, Duxbury and Scituate, were organized during the first sixteen years. The colony of Massachusetts Bay, on the other hand, though established likewise with a prominent aim to construct a congenial religious community, was influenced in a much higher degree by the lower motives which ordinarily lead to new settlements. It was from the beginning favored with a charter of singular liberality, and had not only the direction and aid of an enterprising association in England, but a very large amount of popular favor. In the course of three or four years after the first settlement at Naumkeag (now Salem), more than 1,500 persons, in 17 ships, were added to the original 300, and several towns were organized under the names of Boston (before called Shawmut), Charlestown, Watertown, Dorchester, Roxbury, Mystic and Saugus. In each of these a church was established as soon as a sufficient number of persons could be collected for the purpose, on the same model with the churches of Salem and Plymouth, and generally with a full complement of pastor, elders and other officers.

V. FIRST ARRIVAL.

John Winthrop, the first Governor of the colony of Massachusetts Bay, kept a Journal, in which he gives an account of all public transactions down to the year 1649 ;* and when enumerating the vessels which conveyed immigrants, he makes this record under the date of June 5th, 1632 : "Ar-

Second edition, with additions and corrections, Boston, 1853. His journal from 1630 to 1644 was published at Hartford in 1790, 8vo, p. 364. See also the New England History and General Register, Vol. XXVII, p. 266.

rived, the William Francis, Mr. Thomas, master; which left London on the 9th of March, and reached this port after a voyage of 88 days, with about 60 passengers, whereof were Mr. Weide and old Mr. Batchelder (being aged 71), with their families, and many other honest men." In another place the Governor specifies that the company which came with Mr. Batchelder consisted of a small body of six or seven persons, who went to the same place and co-operated with him in his religious movements. The names of these persons are not given, but from incidental notices we learn that among them were John Wing and his wife, Deborah, a daughter of Mr. Batchelder, with three adult sons, and Edward Dillingham. There is no decisive indication in this or in any other known record of the precise place in England from which this company emigrated. From some expressions in the will of Edward Dillingham, showing that he was in intimate relations with several persons in Bitteswell, Leicestershire, it seems probable that these were his former neighbors, from whom the whole company could not have been distant.* Those who composed this company had evidently sympathized with each other in some peculiar religious views, as well as been united by various marriage and blood relations. The Rev. Benjamin Fessenden of Sandwich, intimates that they had been "very much tainted with Antinoman and Familistical errors," but how much this signifies, when interpreted with a due regard to the prejudices of the religious party then in the ascendant, it is not easy to decide.* Nothing of the kind was ever objected against Mr. Batchelder by the civil or ecclesiastical authorities, before whom he was more than once, for other reasons, arraigned; and as held by the more recent advocates of these views, the sentiments and practices alluded to could not have been very obnoxious to the Puritan divines in Massachusetts. The town of Saugus had been organized only three years before their arrival, and no church had been collected and no minister had been settled there. A few meetings had been held for prayer and exhortation, and some of the inhabitants had attended worship at Salem. The time of their arrival was eleven years and seven months after the landing at Plymouth Rock (Dec. 11, 1620, O. S.), and three years and eight months after the arrival of the first settlers at Salem.

*The will is in substance a "deed of gift" to his sons "in trust, not to be their proper right, but of persons named" in Leicester county, England. They are to take care of the goods until the owners send for them. The goods consisted of certain live stock which had been sent over to America, that the owners might receive back the increase after a term of years, to which were added a number of legacies in money to various friends who had been left in England. See in "The History of Cape Cod by Rev. Frederick Freeman," Boston, 2 vols., Svo, Vol. II, p. 66, note 2.

VI. REV. STEPHEN BATCHELDER.

The leader in this company, the Rev. Stephen Batchelder, must have a special interest in our history, as the progenitor of the family, on the mother's side. He was born in England in the year 1561, and was consequently, as Mr. Winthrop says, 71 years of age when he reached Boston, June 5, 1632. He had been well educated, had received orders in the established church, and had gained considerable reputation among his clerical brethren for learning and ability. From dissatisfaction with the rites and institutions of the church, he had refused conformity with the requirements of his superiors and had been deprived of his ecclesiastical commission. Soon after he had left England, and had gone with his family to Holland, where he had resided several years. He then returned to London, and sailed from there March 9, 1632. His eldest daughter had preceded him a few months, and settled in the new town of Saugus, to which he, with his six relatives and adherents, immediately made his way. He at once constituted them and some others in the place into a church, but without installation, and without observing the forms which were usual on such occasions and required by the civil authorities. Such an irregularity, however, was consistent with the primary principles of independency advocated by many, and whether justified as a principle or excused as a neglect, his ministry was continued there for three years. Four children born before his arrival, one of whom was Stephen, a son of his daughter Theodata Hussey, were baptized by him, but after four months, complaints began to be heard of some irregularities in his conduct. He was arraigned before the Court, October 9th, and he was "required to forbear exercising his gifts as a pastor or teacher publicly in our patent (unless it be to those he brought with him) for his contempt of authority, and until some scandals be removed." In the course of a few months, however, he had so far succeeded in regaining the esteem of the people that the Court removed its injunction (March 4, 1633,) and left him at liberty to resume his public services. The dissensions, nevertheless, were continued, and some began to question whether they were a church or not. On the withdrawal of certain persons from the communion, and their refusal to present their grievances in writing, he was about to proceed to their exclusion, when a council of ministers was called and decided that "although the church had not been properly instituted, yet the mutual exercise of their religious duties had supplied the defect." The difficulties, however, did not cease, but rather increased, until Mr. B., "perceiving no prospect of their termination, requested a dismission for himself and his first members." This was granted under the expectation that he would desist from his ministry or remove from town, but when he renewed his covenant with those who came with him from England, and went on with his ministrations, the people complained that such a course would frustrate their calling another minister, and the magistrates forbade his proceeding. Finding that he disregarded their injunction and refused to appear before them, the magistrates sent the marshall and brought him before the Court of Assistants at Boston, by whom he was discharged on his engaging to leave the town in three months. On May 6, 1635, he was admitted a free-man, and removed first to Ipswich, where he received a grant of fifty acres of land and had the prospect of a settlement; but some difficulties having arisen he left the place, and attempted, with some friends, to establish a colony at Mattacheese, on the shore of Barnstable Bay, where Yarmouth is now situated. In the extremely cold winter of 1637 he went on foot to that place, a distance of 100 miles, but finding the enterprise impracticable for want of pecuniary resources, he relinquished it and went to Newbury, where, on the 6th of July, 1638, the town made him a grant of land. The General Court also, on the 6th of September, gave him permission to settle a town at Hampton, a few miles north of Newburyport in New Hampshire. In 1639 the inhabitants of Ipswich voted to give him sixty acres of upland if he would reside with them, but he did not accept of the proposal. On the 5th of July he and his son-in-law, Christopher Hussey, sold their houses and lands in Newbury for six score pounds and removed to Hampton, where a town was planted and a church was gathered, of which Mr. B. became the minister. In 1640 the town granted him 300 acres of land, and he presented them with a bell for their meetinghouse. There he was treated for some time with great respect but finally dissensions commenced and the people were divided between him and his colleague, Rev. Timothy Dalton. He was also accused of an immorality before both the civil and the ecclesiastical courts, which he at first flatly denied, but finally acknowledged and was excommunicated. Soon after his house took fire and was consumed, with all his property. In 1643 he was restored to communion but not to his ministerial office; and hence, in 1644, when the people of Exeter invited him to settle with them, the Court enjoined him against accepting the invitation. In 1647 he was at Portsmouth, where he remained three years. In 1650, being then 89 years of age, and his second wife, Helena, being dead, he married Mary, a woman whose subsequent course caused him much trouble and scandal. They separated the first year, and both of them petitioned for a divorce, which was not granted. Soon after this (in 1651) Mr. B. left the country and returned to England, where he married his fourth wife, and in 1656 Mary again petitioned the Court to be freed from her husband, who she said had left her destitute with two diseased children. No record is given of the action of the Court on this petition; but before this, and about the time of her husband's departure for England, the records of York for October 15, 1651, show that she was condemned to be publicly whipped, and to be branded with the letter A. Mr. B. died at Hackney, near London, in the one hundredth year of his age.* Freeman says of him:† "From all that we gather out of much that was written of him by his contemporaries, we infer that he was learned, and, in the judgment of charity, a good man, but that his whole life was singularly complicated with incidents of trial." In estimating his character we must take into consideration the peculiar spirit and agitations of the times, when the boldest innovations in opinion and practice were received on the one side with favor, and on the other, and especially on the side of the ruling powers, with intolerance and misrepresentation. Mr. Prince says that "Mr. B. was a man of fame in his day, a gentleman of learning and ingenuity, and wrote a fine and curious hand."*

He had four sons and three daughters. Theodata married Christopher Hussey, who removed to Hampton, and is probably the ancestor of the numerous family of that name in Rhode Island. Deborah married John Wing and went with him to Sandwich. The third daughter married John Sanborn, whose three sons are said to have come over with their grandfather. Two of the sons, Francis and Stephen, remained in London. Henry went to Reading and had a son Henry, of Lynn; and Nathanael removed to Hampton where, in 1656, he married first Deborah Smith, second, widow Mary Wyman and third Elizabeth —, and had seventeen children. Susanna Batchelder, one of the descendants of this Nathanael, married, July 20, 1738, Ebenezer Webster (born at Hampton October 10 1714), the grandfather of Daniel Webster.† Farmer tells us that Nathanael's descendants are numerous in Rockingham county, N. H.,* and Freeman adds that among these are claimed the poet James G. Whittier.† In Morgan's "Sphere of Gentry"‡ is the Batchelder coat-of arms, "a plough beneath a rising sun, vert a plough in fesse, and in base the sun rising or." The editor then remarks that Batchelder was doubtless a man of serious faults, but that the church in Exeter could not have believed in his guilt at Hampton, and that his zealous advocacy of the claims of New Hampshire against Massachusetts may have had some influence in prejudicing the people of the latter against him.

FIRST GENERATION.

I. JOHN WING OF SANDWICH.

1. JOHN WING was the original progenitor of nearly all who bear the name in America so far as they are known to us. Nothing is known of him before his arrival at Boston and his residence at Saugus (Lynn), except that he had married Deborah, the second daughter of Stephen Batchelder, and was one of that minister's company. Some have inferred that he had been with his father-in-law during his sojourn in Holland, and that he had some near connection with the Rev. John Wing, whom we have mentioned as the pastor of an English congregation in Flushing, in the Province of Zealand, in Holland. He does not appear to have been, any more than his associates, possessed of pecuniary means beyond what were requisite for his voyage, and when a removal from Saugus became desirable, his aim was to find a suitable home on the cheaper lands beyond the limits of the older settlements. He was probably one of the number who performed the journey with Mr. Batchelder for the settlement of the Mattacheese, and though that enterprise failed, he perhaps then became acquainted with the region afterwards known as the Peninsula of Cape Cod. The land there was perhaps no more inviting for agricultural purposes than that which then generally engrossed attention within the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, but it had some advantages for fishing purposes, it was not encumbered by heavy forests, it was easy of cultivation, it might be had free by all acceptable occupants, and the Indians in possession of it were remarkable for their uniform friendship for the English. It was within the jurisdiction of the Plymouth Colony, though beyond the limits of any organized town. About ten years before (1627), a trading house had been located at a place called Manomet, at the head of Buzzard's Bay, with the view of maintaining commerce with the southern coast and of avoiding the dangerous navigation around the Cape; but for some reason the enterprise had been abandoned, or was confined to the business of mere transportation. In the year 1637 Mr. Edward Freeman* and nine others who had been residents at Saugus, formed an association "to erect a plantation or town within the precincts of his Majesty's General Court at Plymouth," and near the neck of land between the opposite shores of Barnstable and Buzzard's Bays. On the third day of April, in the same year, the General Court at Plymouth gave to these persons the right to form said plantation or town, "and to receive in more inhabitants to them according to order, and duly to dispose of said lands to such as were or should be orderly admitted to them in said township." They were soon on the ground, and with them about fifty others who were called "associates," chiefly from Saugus, Duxbury and Plymouth. The names of Edward Freeman and Edward Dillingham appear among the original "Ten men of Saugus," and the name of John Wing occurs as the 45th in the list of their first associates. Nearly all those mentioned took families with them, and by the terms of the act granting them permission to settle none were allowed to become housekeepers or to build any cottage or dwelling to reside singly or alone, or if their characters were not acceptable to the Governor. Church membership, communion at the Lord's Table and a regular attendance upon and a proper support of public worship at authorized places were indispensable requisites to becoming a freeman. The whole body of freemen in the town had the right to decide by vote whether any one should be admitted a member of their community, subject, however, to the revision of the Governor and his Assistants. A sufficient quantity of land was granted to the original association to provide liberally for three score families, according to the number and ability of each householder's family. Under the direction of committees appointed by the Court the true bounds of every inhabitant's land were laid out and ordered. In 1651, when the conditions on which the grant of the township was made had been complied with, a deed of the plantation was executed by the Governor to Mr. Freeman, who then made conveyances to his associates. The town was incorporated as early as 1639, and the Indian name of Shawme was exchanged for that of Sandwich. In addition to these private "holdings," certain meadows or marshy lands on the shore near the town were left for the grazing of cattle, as town's commons, and controlled by the town as such. In time these became the property of the representatives of the original freemen. Other woodlands were at first free for every one to obtain from them timber and fuel for private use, but not for exportation.

*Hutchinson in his history of Massachusetts Bay (see Freeman, Vol. I, p. 127, note.) says: "The first settlers of the Old Colony, like those of Massachusetts, were very careful that no title or appellation should be given where it was not due. Not more than half a dozen of the principal gentlemen in the Massachusetts Colony took the title of Esquire; and in a list of 100 freemen not more than four or five were distinguished by a Mr., although they were generally men of substance. Goodman and goodwife were the common appellations." Clergymen were usually allowed the title of Mr. It was to merit and services rather than wealth that the distinctive appellations were given. Graham's History of the United States, Vol. I, p. 309.

In what part of the township John Wing had his residence it is now perhaps impossible to determine. The old traditional home of one branch of the family for subsequent generations was situated about a mile from the present village of Sandwich, near a stream of water between two beautiful ponds, and on a highland overlooking the lower sheet of water and the town. This seems as likely as any other spot to have been selected as his residence. No more attractive location could be found in the town. Very probably the limits of the lower pond have been much increased in later years by a dam thrown across its outlet, by which power has been gained for mills and other manufacturing establishments; but even before this enlargement the scenery from that point must have been more than commonly fine. A number of farms are situated upon the neck of land between the two ponds (formerly known as "Wolf-trap Neck"), some of which have been in the possession of John's descendants until the present time. The exact spot, however, which has generally been regarded as the original home of the progenitor is an eminence near the point where the stream from the upper pond falls into the lower, and since occupied as a factory for nails. Near the present building is an artificial cavity about fifteen feet square and several feet deep, which must once have been a cellar, and is even now surrounded by a few very ancient fruit and ornamental trees. The buildings which once were over and near it are gone, with every other relic of them, and the mansion which has been the residence of his descendants is situated about 200 rods westward. The farm which has usually been connected with this homestead consists of two or three hundred acres of valuable land up the stream and along the borders of the lower pond. Immediately before it across the sheet of water, which lies in the form of a semicircle about a mile in length, and within the arc of the semicircle, is an ancient cemetery, where the earlier inhabitants were buried. On the outer and right margin of the lower end of the pond lies the main village, consisting principally of one street, along which are a grist mill, marble works, the town hall, an academy, several churches, a Masonic hall and two or three hotels. This part of the town has remained without essential alteration from the most ancient period of which we have any account.

In 1638, almost immediately on the settlement of the town a church was formed, and there can be no doubt that public worship was maintained there from the very first. A rude building for that purpose must have been at once erected, for as early as in 1644 the one which was used for worship was called "the old meeting house." The ministers of that day in all the towns were invariably men of respectable talents and learning, such as every where commanded confidence and respect. There was something, however, in the disposition of the original inhabitants of Sandwich which was unfavorable to the harmony and growth of the original congregation. The experience which some of them had had at Saugus was perhaps ill adapted to make them cordial in its support. Even if the strict laws in relation to communion and ministerial subsistence and attendance upon public worship were observed, it is evident that a considerable degree of laxness was from the very first allowed. The freemen of the town were more than once censured by the General Court for allowing persons to settle and reside among them whose views were looked upon as disorderly. The stipends were poorly paid and often were reluctantly collected, the minister complained that few attended upon his ministrations and serious dissensions prevailed among the people. In one instance these are spoken of as caused by a party which had once been under the influence of Stephen Batchelder. The town authorities are said to have been unwilling, or from the state of public feeling unable to enforce the laws relating to public worship, and what were called irregularities. Some of the most respectable inhabitants, like Mr. Edward Freeman and Edward Dillingham, among the original associates, were complained of before the Court and fined. An early record of the church shows only eleven male members, and neither in this nor in any subsequent notice of the business of the church does the name of John Wing nor any of his family for many years appear. They had probably all been communicants at Saugus, and they were doubtless decidedly religious people, but inclined to greater freedom in worship and in ecclesiastical affairs. We shall see that this spirit soon took a direction which led a large portion of the family to forsake the church and the forms of worship established by the civil authority.

Very little can be learned from the meagre records of the town, the church or the general colony regarding the family history of John Wing. He appears to have been a plain man of ordinary intelligence, never aspiring to political distinction, and only ambitious to cultivate his land and decently to bring up his family. In a few instances, however, his name occurs on the records of the General Court as one well qualified for public business. In 1641 he is allowed six acres for his share of the meadow lands held at first in common, but divided afterwards annually for the use of the inhabitants in severalty. On another occasion he was concerned in the construction of a road connecting Sandwich with the earlier settlements. For some time the people had been obliged either to reduce their corn to meal by the slow and laborious Indian process by means of a mortar and pestle, or transport it all the way to Plymouth on their own shoulders or on the back of a horse or cow. Tradition points out the old Indian path by which the people on the Cape thus wearily conveyed their grist to and from Plymouth. In 1652 the Court appointed a jury of thirteen persons to lay out the most convenient track for a road from Sandwich to Plymouth. John Wing was the seventh on this list. The jury was empanelled three days afterwards (Feb. 27) and commenced their work, but two years from that time the road was not completed, and "both Plymouth and Sandwich were presented for not having the country highway between these places cleared so as to be passable for man and horse." Some apprehensions began early to be felt that the Indians of the West were hostilely inclined toward the settlers, and a law was enacted to prevent all Indians from having the use of fire-arms. A number of persons were complained of (about 1642) for allowing Indians to use such weapons even in hunting. Among these were the Assistant Governor Freeman and John Wing for lending guns to Indians. The date of John Wing's or of his wife's death is not recorded. The first part of the Book of Records of Sandwich either has been lost, or was originally so defective that very little can be made of them. The clerk of each town in the colony was by law required to keep a full register of all the births, marriages and deaths which occurred in his town, and these records form a valuable repository to which antiquarians and genealogists can now resort, but no public enactments could secure them against the negligence or the unskilfulness of the officials, the remissness of those who ought to have reported the facts or the ravages of fire in later times. Even the wills of many of the older settlers, from which much information might have been gained, are not unfrequently unrecorded in the county records. A very good idea, however, may be obtained of the common life and manners of the people from the traditions and literature which have come down to us. The solemn scriptural style of speaking, the long beards and short hair, the singular fashion of dress for both men and women, the kind of houses—of which a few specimens still remain on the Cape,—the large fires “kindled by fat pine” in the immense chimneys, the food consisting so much of fish and maize, the “meetings on the Lord’s Day,” the town and church meetings, in which equality and liberty found their utmost expression, the quaint laws which in solemn phrase extended to the minutest details of social and moral conduct, the prolix style of preaching and the long public and private prayers, the public whippings in the pillory, confinement in the stocks and exposures in the public assemblies for private offences and the scarlet letter-markings on the garments, or the brandings in the face for shameful crimes, are all proofs of a state of society utterly passed away. The family of which we are treating was among the most advanced in its opposition to such excesses. But a visitor on the Cape even at the present day will easily discover better representatives of this singular race than can be found perhaps in any other part of the world. The streams of immigration which have swept by them on each hand have left here remnants of an original stock, whose influence has been deeply impressed upon the national character. Poor as the soil and severe as the skies may have been in that region, the men and women which it has sent forth have done much to shape the destinies of this nation.

The number of children had by John and Deborah Wing remains a matter of some uncertainty. We have no evidence that he had any daughters, and very little to make us suspect that he had more than three sons. A vague tradition relates that one son, Matthew, came with the family to America, but returned and died in England. All our reliable accounts, however, speak only of Daniel, John and Stephen, who came with him in the same vessel, and accompanied him until his settlement in Sandwich.*

II. ROBERT WING, OF BOSTON.

2. ROBERT WING. In April 1634, we find recorded the arrival at Boston of the ship Francis, John Cutting, master, with a number of passengers whose names and ages are given. Among these are mentioned Robt. Winge aged 60, and his wife, Judith, aged 43, who presented a certificate signed by "Thos. Clerc, Sec., Philip Browne Pr. Custr., and Ed. Mann, Compt.," that they had taken "the oath of allegiance and supremacy at his Majesty's Custom House before his Majesty's officers at Ipswich, in the County of Suffolk, England, according to the order of the Lords and others of his Majesty's most Honorable Privy Council." This was one year and nine months later than the arrival of Stephen Batchelder and his company on the same ship and probably from the same port. Whether there was any near relationship between this Robert and John Wing has not yet been ascertained. He settled at Boston where his wife Judith soon died, and he

*After speaking of John Wing of Sandwich, Freeman, in his History of Cape Cod, says: "From the preceding have sprung numerous descendants, whose genealogy would fill a large volume. The different branches are widely scattered and generally highly respectable. Several are now represented in this town (Sandwich). We wish we had space for an extended genealogy, that our pains in collecting it might at least be requited by the pleasure of publishing it."

married Joan or Johanna, who survived him. In 1647 he prayed the General Court for release from a fine which had for some reason been imposed on him, and for relief in his circumstances, inasmuch as he was "now above 80 years old with nothing to live on, and having four small children." Savage suggests that according to this he had grown old rather rapidly since his arrival in America, and that one or two of his children must have died, since the births and baptisms of not less than six are mentioned in the public records. The latter suggestion is probable, but the other discrepancy may be accounted for by the fact that in public registers round numbers are frequently used and perfect accuracy is not often studied. On the 21st day of the ninth month, 1651, "Thomas Walker of Boston and Elizabeth Baker, wife to Alexander Baker, of Boston, deposed that Robert Wing, late of Boston, being on his deathbed sent for them and said in their presence that he would leave all he had into his wife's hands, praying her to be good to his children; that this was three days before he died and that this was his last will and testament. It was accordingly ordered that Johanna Wing, wife to Robert Wing, deceased, shall be responsible to the four children she had by him. Edward Rawson, Recorder." The inventory of his estate was found to be £124 7s. 6d. The names of his children by Johanna were; John, born July 22, 1637; Hannah, born Feb. 14, 1640; Jacob, born July 31, 1642; all baptized October 16, 1642; Elizabeth, born July 5, 1644; Joseph, born Oct. 13, baptized Nov. 1, 1646; and Benjamin, baptized Feb. 18, 1649, aged seven days.*

* "New England Historical and Genealogical Register," Vol. IV, p. 246.

As we have no very connected account of Robert Wing's descendants, it may be as well for us to give in this place what we have in relation to them.

3. JOHN, the oldest son of Robert and Joanna Wing (2) was a shopkeeper and a sea captain in Boston and appears to have been a very thrifty and energetic man. He was able as early as 1674 to give a bond for £4200, secured by a mortgage on what was called the "Castle Tavern," a valuable property in Boston near the Common, which was discharged in three years. He was also the owner of a "mansion, brew house, stable and other buildings in Boston near the Castle Tavern." In his will dated Feb 24, 1701, probated March 12, 1702 or 1703, he styles himself "a mariner," and "gives, devises and bequeaths to his son John and to his heirs and assigns forever" some "housing and land lying near the town dock in Boston, together with a brick messuage thereon standing, formerly known by the name of the George Tavern and all the edifices thereunto belonging, which I have since built upon the said land, which in the whole cost me about £3400, and which have a charge or incumbrance upon them of £1000 due to Mr. Wm Brown, and is now possessed by Wm. Pemberton." This latter property was made over by his son John by deed dated April 9, 1708, to said Wm. Pemberton. The will also makes mention of his wife Joshabeth, his sons Robert, John and Ebenezer, his daughters Sarah Tomlin and Elizabeth Dowell, and his grandchildren Sarah and Thomas Tomlin and James Dowell. In the will of John Baker John Wing is named the "master and commander of the ship "Hercules" which was afterwards lost. A street in Boston now called Elm Street, was long called Wing's and still earlier Hudson's Lane, from the successive owners of the mansion, brewhouse, &c., above mentioned, located upon this street. He was in 1675 an Ensign (under Capt. Daniel Hinchman), a Lieutenant in 1683, and a Captain in 1684-5 in the Honorable Artillery Company of Boston. He married Joshabell, a daughter of James Davis, a mariner, a member of the church, and a freeman in Boston in 1635. His children were : John, born Aug. 14, 1660, died Aug. 26, 1660 ; Joanna, born Sept. 4 1662 ; Sarah, born May 3, 1664 ; (these three died young;) Sarah again born Feb. 9, 1666 ; Joshabell, born Dec. 15. 1667 ; Ebenezer, born Oct. 15, 1669 ; Elizabeth, born Sept. 19 1671 ; Robert, born Sept. 8, 1673 ; John again born Aug. 7, 1678 ; and Joanna again born Nov. 25, 1680.

John Langley, of Providence, Rhode Island, in a record kept by himself under date of 1810 says : " My grandmother whose maiden name was Mary King, was born Feb. 4, 1676. She married —— Wing, and their first son Robert was born Dec. 20, 1699. I am satisfied that the descendants of said Wing have resided at Little Choptank, or vicinity, in Virginia, for nearly a century."* On the 18th of March, 1639, the Court " allowed Goodman Winge sixpence for attendance at an inquest respecting the death of Peter Fitchew."†

4. HANNAH, the daughter of Robert and Joanna Wing(2), married Jedediah Lombard, May 20, 1668, and had Jedediah born Dec. 25, 1669 (who married Hannah Davis Nov. 8, 1669); Thomas born June 22, 1671 ; Hannah, born Aug. 1673 ; and Experience born April 1677.

*New England History and Genealogical Register, Vol. XI, p. 248.
†Ditto, Vol. VIII, p. 55.

5. ELIZABETH, the daughter of Robert and Joanna Wing(2), married John Walley, of Boston, and died April 3, 1661.

6. JOSEPH, the son of Robert and Joanna Wing(2), was probably the person of that name who is said in the records of Woburn to have been admitted a freeman in that town Oct. 2, 1678, or Oct. 15, 1679.

SECOND GENERATION.

7. DANIEL, the eldest son of John and Deborah Batchelder Wing (1) of Sandwich, came with his father from England, and accompanied him until he was settled at Sandwich. They resided near one another, and perhaps in the same house. In 1640, June 28, Andrew Hallett, being about to remove to Yarmouth, conveyed certain landed property to Daniel Wing, the instrument being witnessed by John Wing and Edward Dillingham. This was undoubtedly a farm in the immediate neighborhood of the paternal mansion. The house in which he resided was probably not far from the spot which we have supposed to be the residence of his father. With his brothers he was enrolled in 1643 among those who were at that time between the ages of 16 and 60, and therefore liable to bear arms. Even at this early period "some apprehensions of hostile movements on the part of the Narragansetts on the west of the Bay which now bears their name, began to be entertained, and the people were called upon for military drills and equipments.

In Sandwich as well as in Plymouth and other places, twelve or more persons "were enjoined to bring their muskets with shot and powder every Lord's Day to the meeting with their sword and furniture to every piece ready for service if need should require." The taking of fish was an important matter in the commerce of the town and the profits of the leases of the Herring River, and the cutting up of whales and other large fish which had escaped after being wounded from their pursuers and been stranded upon the shores of the Bay, were no inconsiderable item in defraying the expenses of the schools. Accordingly in 1652 "an agreement was made with Daniel Wing and Michael Blackwell for the taking of the fish in Herring River;" and it was ordered that Edmund Freeman, Daniel Wing and four others who are named "shall take care of all the fish that Indians shall cut up within the limits of the town, so as to provide safely for it, and shall dispose of the fish for the town's use; also, that if any man that is an inhabitant shall find a whale and report it to any of these six men, he shall have a double share; and that these six men shall take care to provide laborers and whatever is needful, so that whatever whales either Indian or white man gives notice of, they may dispose of the proceeds to the town's use, to be divided equally to every inhabitant."

An earlier building of a mill for the accommodation of the inhabitants, having failed, in 1654, four persons were engaged to build one, "the town paying twenty pounds;" and this sum was at once voluntarily subscribed by Daniel Wing and twenty-one other inhabitants. This and another mill were soon after erected, and millers were appointed by the town "to grind and have the toll for their pains."

It was during the year 1655 that the names of Daniel Wing and a number of the prominent citizens of Sandwich are first mentioned in connection with a serious religious dissension in the town. From the first settlement of the place, its inhabitants were looked upon by the authorities at Plymouth, as more than commonly indifferent to the execution of the laws in favor of uniformity in worship. Many persons had been subjected to fines for speaking disrespectfully of the laws, and of the mode of conducting public worship. So great became the falling off of attendance upon the ministrations of Mr. Leverich, the first minister, that, (about 1654) he concluded to leave the place, and for nearly twenty years the people were destitute of a regular pastor. In the meantime Mr. Richard Bourne and Mr. Thomas Tupper, persons "of a religious turn of mind, and possessed of some powers of public speaking but without a regular ordination," conducted the services on the Lord's day. "Each of them had his party, and each was the occupant of the pulpit according as he might have the most adherents." The congregation had become much reduced in numbers, and was not formally divided though distracted by factions. One portion of them are said to have been tinged with fanaticism and were much blamed for driving away the late pastor. Another portion is said to have been disgusted with such a state of things and to have mainly withdrawn from public worship. These last are said by Rev. Mr. Fessenden, the minister of Sandwich 1722-46, to have embraced "Antinomian and Familistical errors, under the ministry of Stephen Batchelder, the first minister of Lynn." And yet Daniel Wing's name appears with eighteen others of the most respectable and conservative of the church members, attached to a call given about 1655-6, to some person engaged as a temporary supply. The call was entered upon the regular minutes of that time though it is now without superscription indicating to whom it was addressed or its precise date.

Such notices prepare us to appreciate the position of Daniel Wing and others who acted with him in political and religious affairs. As early as 1646, a general movement was made throughout the Plymouth Colony in behalf of toleration. A petition was extensively signed and presented to the General Court "to allow and maintain full and free tolerance of religion to all men that would preserve the civil peace and submit to government." It was supported by numbers of the Deputies, and by a large portion of the inhabitants of Sandwich. It was however overruled by the arbitrary act of Gov. Bradford. In 1654, it is recorded that "the people of both colonies began about this time to be indifferent to the ministry, and to exercise their own gifts, doubting the utility of public preaching." Up to this time Daniel acted with the church of Sandwich, and his contributions were among the largest in the support of Mr. Leverich and in the repairs of the parsonage. His name does not appear among the opponents of that minister, and the probability is that he was one of those who were offended at the proceedings which resulted in the long vacancy. In 1657, "the people called Quakers" made their first appearance in Sandwich. In Bowden's "History of the Society of Friends in America," it is mentioned that two English Friends named 'Christopher Holden and John Copeland came to Sandwich on the 20th of 6th month, 1657, and had a number of meetings, and that their arrival was hailed with feelings of satisfaction by many who had long been burdened with a lifeless ministry and dead forms in religion. But the town had its advocates of religious intolerance and no small commotion ensued." The Governor issued a warrant for their arrest, but when a copy of the warrant was asked for by Wm. Newland at whose house the meetings had been held, it was refused and its execution was resisted. A severe rebuke and a fine was then inflicted upon them. The two prisoners were sentenced to be whipped, but the selectmen of the town declined to act in the case and the marshal was obliged to take them to Barnstable to find a magistrate willing to comply with the order. Tradition reports that many meetings were held at a secluded spot in the woods which from the preacher's christian name was afterwards known as "Christopher's Hollow." Numerous complaints were made against divers persons in Sandwich for "meetings at private houses and inveighing against magistrates;" and several men and women were publicly whipped for "disturbing public worship, for abusing the ministers," for "encouraging" others in holding meetings, for "entertaining the preachers and for unworthy speeches." Daniel Wing, with three others, was arrested "for tumultuous carriage at a meeting of Quakers" and severely fined, though there is no evidence that a single Quaker, besides the preachers, was present, and it is certain that neither of these persons professed at that time any adherence to the new sect.* Daniel and Stephen Wing refused to take the "oath of fidelity," not on the ground that they declined all oaths, but because this particular oath pledged them to assist in the execution of an intolerant enactment. Indeed so generally were the laws against free worship condemned in Sandwich, that the constable was "unable to discharge his duty by reason of many disturbent persons there residing," and it was enacted that "a marshal be chosen for such service in Sandwich, Barnstable and Yarmouth." In 1658 a list was made out by the Governor and other magistrates of "certain persons who refused to take the oath of fidelity," and for that reason had no legal right to act as inhabitants. They were, therefore, each fined five pounds to the colony's use, and it was ordered that each and every one of them should henceforth have no power to act in any town meeting till better evidence appeared of their legal admittance, nor to claim title or interest in any town privileges as town's men, and that no man should henceforth be admitted an inhabitant of Sandwich, or enjoy the privileges thereot, without the approbation of the church and of Mr. Thomas Prince (the Governor), or of the assistants whom they shall choose. Many were summoned to Plymouth to account for non-attendance upon public worship, and distrainments were exacted from these recusants in Sandwich to satisfy for fines to the amount of six hundred and sixty pounds. Of these fines Daniel Wing paid not less than twelve pounds.

Up to this time Daniel Wing, with others who acted with him, appear simply as friends of toleration and resisters of an oppressive law. But it was not long before he and most of these sympathizers became active converts to the persecuted sect. "In 1658 no less than eighteen families in Sandwich recorded their names" in one of the documents of the Society. Writers of that period (1658-60) say: "We have two strong places in this land, the one at Newport and the other at Sandwich; almost the whole town of Sandwich is adhering towards them," and the Records of Monthly Meetings of Friends show that "the Sandwich Monthly Meeting was the first established in America." Its records extend as far back as 1672, which is earlier than any other known in this country. It was not until the accession of King Charles the Second (about 1660) that these proceedings against the Quakers were discontinued by the royal order, and the most obnoxious laws were repealed in the colony of Plymouth, when we are told that "the Quakers became the most peaceful, industrious and moral of all the religious sects." In the fervor of religious zeal, and while smarting under severe injuries, they doubtless at this early period provoked the authorities by indiscretions which none of their successors in the faith would attempt to justify, and yet every descendant of the Puritans must regret that those who had themselves suffered so much for their conscientious convictions should have inflicted such severities upon dissenters from their own views.

In 1658 the true bounds of every inhabitant's lands were laid out and ordered by the General Court, so that the lands might be brought to record. There were fifty-five such owners whose names are recorded, among whom Daniel and Stephen Wing are mentioned. According to some records Daniel died in the year 1664, but Freeman and Savage make his death five years earlier (1659). His will was dated May 3, 1659, but as one of his children was born in 1660 and another later in the year 1664, we agree with the Plymouth records in placing his death near the latter date. He married, 9th month, 5, 1641, Hannah, a daughter of John Swift. The Swifts were numerous in the western part of the town, especially at Scusset (West Sandwich), where an inn was for many years kept by one of the name, of such notoriety as to give the place itself a considerable reputation. Hannah died Dec. 1st, 1664, soon after the birth of her youngest child. Her father's will, dated the twelfth day of the eighth month, 1662, bequeaths certain amounts to Samuel and John, the sons of his daughter Hannah; and the inventory of his property was made May 1, 1666, by Stephen Wing and Stephen Skiffe.

The descendants of Daniel and Stephen Wing have nearly all been connected with the society calling themselves Friends. The place in Sandwich where they have from the first worshiped is near Spring Hill, about three miles eastward from the central village. There in the midst of a thickly settled neighborhood of the same faith now rises the neat and commodious house of worship, which has succeeded one or two less costly structures before it. It has no spire,

*In the 18th volume of the N. E. Hist. and Gen. Register is mentioned the will of a certain Daniel Wing, in which the testator speaks of his sons Samuel Batchelder, John, Daniel and Jashub (the last of whom is called his youngest), and of a daughter named Lydia Abbott. From the coincidence of names in these two lists we can hardly avoid concluding that this must have been the Daniel who was the son of John of Sandwich. It adds, however, to the list of the latter's sons the name of Jashub, but as we not unfrequently find that the public records fail to have all the children of a particular family, and as we find that there was according to the Sandwich records, a Jashub Wing who was admitted a townsman in 1700 and a Shearjashub Wing who was on the list of freemen there in 1702, we may accept of this list as complementary to the one given above.

but being on an eminence can be seen from afar. It is divided into two parts, for the men and women respectively, and a partition is so contrived that it can be let down between them on such occasions as require separate meetings. The seats which are occupied by the ministers are three in number, gradually ascending one above the other, extending on each side of this partition, and divided by it, so as to accommodate the male and female preachers. On the days when the writer was present (1874), the house was well filled with intelligent worshipers, and the preachers' seats were occupied by about a dozen men and women of a venerable and devout aspect, inhabitants of Sandwich, and during the week engaged in ordinary employments. Here for six generations this people have worshiped God according to their simple forms, little affected by the changes of the outer world, and sincerely witnessing for their original principles. Even during our first Revolutionary and the late Civil Wars, though they showed in many ways on which side their warm sympathies were, they could not be induced to act inconsistently with their peculiar tenets. In 1692 the liberty of conscience which had been secured to them only by royal order, was guaranteed by the new charter, and they were no longer called upon to support other establishments. Near the house of worship are two cemeteries, the oldest of which is now filled with graves, which, however, are invisible above the smooth green turf, in accordance with the principle formerly entertained that monuments and inscriptions were too generally expressions of an ostentatious and flattering spirit. In the more recently constructed graveyard low tombstones are allowed, on which may be inscribed only the names of the deceased with the dates of their birth and death. We seek in vain, therefore, to identify the precise spot in which the dust of any one of the family in its earlier generations now reposes. We only know that within that ancient enclosure are probably buried more of the name than can be found in any other in America.*

8. JOHN, the second son of John and Deborah Batchelder Wing (1) of Sandwich, was born in England and came to America with his father in 1632. His age at that time is not known, and we have no means of learning it from any subsequent dates. He went with his father and brothers from Saugus to Sandwich on the first settlement of the latter town, but must have left home at an early period to form a new settlement on the Cape, eastward. The town of Yarmouth was incorporated in 1639, but in the last month of the same year Barnstable was set off between it and Sandwich. It extends from Barnstable Bay on the north to the sound on the south. A part of its northern shore was originally called Mattacheese from an Indian tribe residing there, on whose lands his maternal grandfather, Rev Stephen Batchelder, had, with a few friends, made a fruitless attempt to form a settlement.

The precise date of his removal cannot be determined, as the early records of the town of Yarmouth were, in 1674, destroyed by fire and the first twenty pages of the Harwich† records are entirely lost. From incidental notices in the records of the Court of Plymouth and at Barnstable we gather a few items. The first reference of any interest to our history is under the date of March 1st, 1659, as follows : "The Court, taking notice that John Wing is erecting a building in a place that is out of the bounds of the township, and conceiving that such practices if permitted may prove prejudicial to the whole, do order that the said John Wing, and others that have done or shall do so, be prohibited to persist therein until it be further cleared to what township such lands belong on which they build." This order refers to a requirement of that period, that no persons should settle upon lands which were not included within the chartered limits of towns, and under the permission of the Court and body of freemen incorporated by the government. There was some doubt whether Sautucket, the place at which John Wing had commenced building, was within the limits which had been given to Yarmouth township, and until that question had been decided it was deemed proper to prohibit its settlement. As, however it was reputed to be, and was soon afterwards proved to be within the chartered limits of the township, John Wing had already begun to build and soon established himself there. Indeed there are some indications that for an indefinite time before this he had purchased and lived upon a piece of land in the vicinity. It was in the northern part of the town, in the neighborhood of the sea coast. The Indians were then and for some time afterwards numerous in that region, but they were peaceable and never engaged in any hostile proceedings against the English. The precise spot on which John Wing settled is supposed to have been a high piece of land surrounded by swamp or meadow land, subsequently called "Wing's Island," about a mile northeast of the present town of Brewster. It was doubtless selected on account of its fertility and adaptation to the grazing of cattle. Freeman calls him and Lieut John Dillingham (also from Sandwich) "large land owners." The line on the east of Brewster, for a long time called "Wing's Line," was the base of future surveys, and indicates a tract of land extending across the peninsula from the northern to the southern coast. A large pond also in Brewster bears the name of Wing to the present time. In 1677, at a town meeting May 30, "the townsmen of Yarmouth did forewarn John Wing and our neighbors of Sawtucket from purchasing any lands in the bounds of our township of any Indian, or to take any possession thereof from them as being contrary to Court order." The order here referred to was one which prohibited any private purchases from the aboriginal possessors of the soil; in the first place because no private Indian was really the owner of tribal lands in severalty, and in the second place because advantage was often taken of Indians by selfish and dishonest persons. It appears, however, that some transactions of this kind were allowed, especially with certain chiefs or sachems, who were actual owners of individual property. The very transaction here alluded to was subsequently allowed, and became the legal title to a large body of land. In the Book of Evidences of lands for the jurisdiction of New Plymouth there is recorded a deed of land, of which the following is the purport, viz: On the first of March 1676-7, John Wing and John Dillingham, in behalf of themselves and others associated with them, (viz: Thomas Clarke, Kenelm Winslow, Paul Sears and Ananias and Joseph Wing,) purchased of Robin (Indian), of Mattacheese, and Sarah his wife, daughter of Nepaitan* sachem of Maitacheese, of Samson, of Nobscusset,

*The records of the "Monthly Meeting of Sandwich" show that the Society in that place was probably the earliest and for many years the largest of the same denomination in America. Regular worship has been maintained there since 1656, which was about 12 years after the rise of the sect in England, and before it had been generally established there.

†The township of Harwich was set off from Yarmouth in 1694; in 1793 that of Dennis from Yarmouth on the east; and in 1803 that of Brewster from Harwich on the north.

*Nepaitan was a chief under Massasoit, the principal sachem of the Wampanoags, a friendly tribe of Indians which had jurisdiction over all the Indians along the south shore of Massachusetts Bay. He be-and Panasamust his wife, and of Ralph of Nobscusset, and Menetatomust his wife, other daughters of Nepaitan; all that tract of land, both upland and meadow, which they had in common or partnership lying in Saquetucket in the liberties of Yarmouth between the place commonly called Bound Brook on the west, and the middle of Saquetucket river on the east. In this purchase John Wing was to have a third part of four shares, Dillingham two shares, Clarke one share, Winslow two shares, and Ananias and Joseph Wing each one third of four shares. The division was made and the land was deeded to each April 16, 1677-8. The original deed is said to be in the possession of Amos Otis, Esq., but a copy of it in full has been taken by the writer. The land lies within the limits of the present township of Brewster and is said to be among the most valuable in that vicinity. On the 15th of March, 1680, it appears from the town records that an agreement was made "with our neighbors, the purchasers or proprietors of the land between Stoney Brook and Bound Brook, subsequently signed by Ananias Wing, Paul Sears, Kenelm Winslow and John Dillingham, jun., on the one part, and by John Thacher and others on behalf of the town." This was probably the final settlement of the question between the town and the association in the above mentioned purchase.

longed to a tribe which went by the name of Mattacheesetts or Mattacheese. He with another chief of the same tribe with their heirs and assigns had been guaranteed the possession of a large parcel of land "bordering to the sewards between Bound Brook and the Sautucket River; provided they should live upon the same, and if they should ever sell the same, should sell it to the inhabitants of Barnstable before any other." Freeman, Vol. I. pp. 159-60. The names of Robin and Samson frequently appear in the Indian history of those times and always in acts of friendship toward the white settlers. See Drake's Book of the Indians, Book II. p. 47.

The years 1675-6 were memorable for the war with the Indians commonly called Philip's war. In consequence of the friendly attitude which had always been maintained by the tribes on the Cape, the inhabitants there were not molested at their homes, but they were subjected to severe losses both of men and money for the supply of troops. John Wing was assessed, in 1776, "towards the charge in the late war, five pounds, sixteen shillings and three pence."

No traces are now perceptible of the residence in which John Wing lived for more than forty years. His first wife's name was Elizabeth, and Savage thinks that he found her in Saugus (Lynn). She was the mother of all his children. She was probably the person meant in the record of Yarmouth, which says: "Jan. 31, 1692—The last of January Old Goody Wing died." "In 1723 the pew No. 9 in the new meeting house was assigned to John Wing, Sen.," for which he paid five pounds ten shillings, this being the ninth according to the dignity and valuation of the pews. For his second wife he married Miriam the daughter of Stephen Deane, of Plymouth, one of the "old comers."* John Wing died in 1699. His will was dated May 2d, 1696, and was witnessed by John Thatcher, John Dillingham and William Griffith. A codicil is dated Feb. 6, 1798-9. This will, which is very lengthy, was presented to probate Aug 10, 1699, and it is now on record at Barnstable. It makes mention of his wife Miriam, his three children, Ananias, Susannah Parslow, and Oseah Turner, his grandsons John and Elnathan and the children of his deceased son Joseph. He probably never bore office in his town, although he appears to have been public spirited and much respected. He was devoted rather to agriculture and the acquisition of land for himself and his children. His wife survived him for two or three years. She made a will, which was dated May 24, 1701, and was probated in January 1702-3. It gives the principal part of her property, inherited from her wealthy parents, to Deane Smith of Chatham whose mother was "her sister Bethia Smith of Monomoith." The inventory of her personal property was taken in January, 1702-3, and its value was assessed at "seventy-eight pounds, twelve shillings and two pence."

5. Oseah, who married a Turner.
6. John.
7. Susannah, born about 1647, married William Parslow.

9. STEPHEN, the youngest son of John and Deborah Batchelder Wing (1), resided in Sandwich. It is contended by some that he continued to live with his father even after his marriage. Tradition, however, with considerable confidence and probability, fixes his precise location on a farm not far from Spring Hill, now in the possession of a descendant. A part of the house which he built in 1644 is said to be still in existence. From his business as a town official, we conclude that for a while at least he must have lived at the central village of Sandwich. In 1646-7, he was married to Oseah, the daughter of Edward Dillingham, one of the nine associates to whom the town had been granted April 3, 1637. In accordance with the rigid laws of that period, and which were enforced against all however high their position in society, some objections were made against him and a fine was laid upon him by the Court at Plymouth, March 2, 1646-7 for the too early birth of his first child after marriage. He appears however to have been an earnest advocate of religion and of morality, for he was a strenuous supporter of religious meetings and of public order. Yet he with many others of that period came in conflict with the exclusiveness and intolerance to which both church and state were then committed. From the first the whole family of his father and his mother's father were inclined to a greater freedom in worship and life than the customs and laws of the colonies permitted. In this they had the sympathies of what seems to have been for many years a majority of the inhabitants of Sandwich.

The religious difficulties of the town by no means originated as has been supposed, with the advent of the Quakers. Loud complaints were made respecting those who resisted the severe and arbitrary laws of the colony long before any meetings forbidden by law were set up, or the name of Quaker was known. And yet the prevalence of such a spirit and sentiment prepared the people of Sandwich to decline enforcing and even to resist the cruel laws against the Quakers when these people made their appearance. In 1657 when Nicholas Upsall visited Sandwich there was a great commotion. Public proclamation was made that for every hour's entertainment of him "a severe fine was to be exacted." In spite of such a law, several families at that time not at all inclined to Quakerism, not only received him to their houses, but allowed him and others to hold meetings and attended upon them. Stephen, with his brother

Daniel, began first with contending for tolerance, and soon their sympathy with suffering was exchanged for conversion to the faith of the sufferers. Severe fines were imposed upon him, imprisonment was threatened if not absolutely inflicted on him, and even the town privileges of a freeman were withdrawn from him and his friends because he declined for a time to take the oath of fidelity which bound him to assist in the execution of such laws. He had been admitted a freeman and enrolled among those "liable to bear arms" in 1643, and had been assigned his proper proportion and boundary of land in 1658. So large, however, was the number of converts to the Friends, and so general the disposition to tolerate them among the people of Sandwich, that the laws against them could not be enforced, and if any punishments were inflicted it had to be done out of town. Stephen and his family became permanently connected with the Society of Friends, and his posterity have in all their generations remained true to his example.

In 1667 he with William Griffith presented to probate the will of his father-in law, Edward Dillingham, and in 1669 he was chosen town clerk. In 1675 the town voted to record his name with many others as having a just right to the privileges of the town. In 1678 he seems to have overcome his scruples about taking the oath of fidelity for his name that year appears among those on the list of its receivers. On the 9th day of the 4th month 1653-4, his wife Oseah died ; and on the 7th of the 11th month of the same year he married Sarah, the daughter of John Briggs, who came to America in 1635, aged 20. She died 3d month, 26, 1689 ; but the period of his own death is uncertain. One account gives it as 2d month, 24, 1710 (Old Style). The will of one named Stephen Wing is given in the records, dated Dec 2 1700, and proved July 13, 1710 ; and it mentions sons Nathanael, Elisha and John, and daughters Sarah Gifford and Abigail Wing, and a grandson, Jeremiah Gifford. "Ebenezer Wing and Matthew Wing, sons of the deceased," were appointed by the judge to be executors of the will. From this date we infer that Stephen continued to live through the first decade of the last century, although he must then have been not less than eighty-eight years of age.

9. Ebenezer, born 11th month, 5, 1671.
10. Matthew (Matthias), born 3d month, 167 $\frac{3}{4}$.

*The names of Nathanael and Elisha appear in the Family Records of one branch of Stephen's descendants. The list of his children taken from the Sandwich records and commencing with Ephraim in 1649, we know is defective, for the name of Nathanael is mentioned in the Plymouth Records of March 2, 1646-7. The probability seems to be that the names of the first two children of Stephen and Oseah Dillingham Wing were either never placed upon the town records on account of the withdrawal of Stephen and others from the church established by law, or if they were recorded there, they were lost with some of the first leaves of that record. The name of "Thomas Wing Senior" is given in the Town records of 1672, as a representative of the town in some transactions with "The Sachem of Manomet," and the affix of Senior implies that there was yet another of the same name. We have no means of knowing the relationship of this Thomas, who however must have been a man of considerable distinction in the public affairs of that period. 11. SAMUEL, a son of Daniel and Hannah Swift Wing (7) was with others admitted a townsman to vote for officers, etc., and took 'the oath of fidelity' in 1681. Samuel and John, with their sisters were mentioned by name in the will of their maternal grandfather, John Swift. This will was witnessed and the inventory of the property was made by Stephen Wing and others.

12. JOHN, a son of Daniel and Hannah Swift Wing (7), went with other inhabitants of Sandwich in 1689 to settle at Sippecan on the western side of Buzzard's Bay, and at that time within the limits of Barnstable County. The place was originally incorporated under the name of Rochester, but was soon set off to Plymouth County and a part of it recovered the old Indian appellation. His will is dated March 15, 1717, and his death took place Aug. 1 of that year. In it he makes mention of property due him from "the estate of his honored father, Daniel Wing, of Sandwich," and bequeaths something to each of his children then alive. The name of his wife, Martha Spooner, is also given as if she were living when the will was made.

13. DANIEL, jun., the youngest son of Daniel and Hannah Swift Wing (7), was entered as townsmen of Sandwich in 1691 and married, in 1686, Deborah, a daughter of Henry Dillingham "in Friends' way." His residence was a short distance from his father's, near the outlet of the upper pond as it enters the lower. Daniel died in the third month of the year 1740. He appears to have been the owner of a considerable amount of property. "On the 13th of May, 1717, he deeded half of his undivided interest in some lands which he owned in Dartmouth, Bristol County, Mass., to his son Edward. In the deed Daniel speaks of himself as a cooper, and of Edward as a husbandman."—[Holden.]

II. CHILDREN OF JOHN OF YARMOUTH.

14. JOSEPH, the son of John and Elizabeth Wing (8) married April 12, 1676, Jerusha Mayhew, and thus formed a connection with the celebrated missionary family of the Mayhews of Martha's Vineyard. In the will of his father his sons are spoken of, but their names are not given. He was one of the shareholders in the land association which purchased the section between Privet Creek and Sauquatucket Riber. He was buried May 31, 1679. He had at least one son whose name has come down to us, viz., John.

15. ANANIAS, the son of John and Elizabeth Wing (8), settled in that part of Yarmouth which has since been incorporated as Brewster, and the Records of Harwich give his wife's name as Hannah, and her death as taking place Dec. 9, 1730. He was among the "inhabitants of Yarmouth who lost horses in the first expedition to Mount Hope against King Philip in 1675," and he was assessed three pounds, sixteen shillings for war expenses. He united with many others in petitioning Governor Josiah Winslow and the General Court on the subject of a war against the Narragansett Indians, and finally went as a private soldier under Captain John Gorham in the second expedition against that tribe in 1676 when the troops suffered so severely. In 1733 grants were made of lands to those who had served in the Indian wars, and Ananias was one of the few who survived to share in this tardy expression of gratitude. He died Aug. 30, 1718, and his will dated March 5, 1717, shows that he was possessed of a large landed estate. His widow Hannah lived many years after his death and died Dec. 9, 1730.

16. JOHN, jun., son of John and Elizabeth Wing (8), married Mary ——, and died about the year 1683. His widow, with the assistance of Jonathan Bangs, (whose son James married Bethia Wing in 1735–6), settled up his estate, the inventory of which was taken June 9, 1683. They left but one child whose name was John.

17. SUSANNAH, the youngest daughter of John and Elizabeth Wing (8), married William Parslow, and died Aug. 2 1717, aged about 70.

III. STEPHEN WING'S CHILDREN.

18. NATHANAEL, the son of Stephen and Oseah Dillingham Wing (9), was admitted a townsman in Sandwich in 1681, and is probably the one of that name mentioned by Rev. Benjamin Fessenden in his list of heads of families in Sandwich in 1730. His sons were Nathanael, Ebenezer and Joseph.

21. EBENEZER, the son of Stephen and Sarah Briggs Wing (9), was doubtless the one of that name who was admitted a townsman in 1700, is mentioned on the list of freemen in 1702, as the guardian of the younger children of Edward Freeman in 1720 and in Fessenden's list of heads of families in 1730. In 1744 Ebenezer Wing, "with 23 others of Pocasset and Manomet, petitioned to be released from paying to the support of Rev. B. Fessenden, the regular minister of Sandwich and the town schools." This was probably on account of his connection with another congregation and with other schools than those which were sustained by law.

28. EDWARD, the eldest son of Daniel and Deborah Dillingham Wing (13), resided for some time in Sandwich, but after a while removed to Dartmouth, Bristol County, Mass., where his father had been the owner of lands which were now deeded to him. He was married three times; first to Desire Smith of Dartmouth (Nov. 1713), second to Sarah, daughter of Abraham and Hannah Tucker (June 1, 1714), and third to Patience Ellis (October 1728). In some legal instruments now in the possession of a branch of the family at Fort Edward, are a number of receipts, notes, deeds and conveyances, from which we are able to infer what must have been the relations of the several parties. Among these are a certificate of marriage between Edward Wing and Sarah, a daughter of Abraham and Hannah Tucker, of Dartmouth, (witnessed by Dorcas, Matthew and Samuel Wing); a deed in which Daniel Wing "a cooper," conveys to Edward Wing, "a husbandman," one-half of his undivided interest in his lands in Dartmouth; a Collector's warrant for the town of Dartmouth, dated March 21, 1725-6, in which Edward Wing is mentioned as a constable; two deeds, dated 1698, by which Daniel conveyed to Edward Wing two parcels of land, one of 85 and another of 15 acres, in Dartmouth; two other deeds dated respectively 1716 and 1727, in one of which Edward is styled an "innholder" and a "weaver."

By his second marriage he had Edward (born in Sandwich in 1720); Abraham, (born at Dartmouth, August 4, 1721); Joseph, Jemimah and perhaps Jedediah.

29. SAMUEL, a son of Daniel and Deborah Dillingham Wing (13), married Dorothy ——. They had three sons, viz.: Daniel, Samuel and Barnabas; and three daughters, viz.: Jemimah, Hannah and Deborah. He died in the 2d month, 12, 1732, aged 41 years and 6 months

30. ZACCHEUS, a son of Daniel and Deborah Dillingham Wing (13), married Content; a daughter of Benjamin Swift, of Falmouth, Mass., in the 4th month, 25, 1730, and lived and died on a farm in Sandwich.

In the year 1768, at a town meeting 2d month, 20, "a petition was presented from the people called Quakers for their proportionate share of the ministerial lands. "It was signed by Joshua Wing, George Allen, Barnabas Hoxie Gideon Hoxie, Samuel Gifford, John Allen, Edward Wing, Edward Dillingham, Josiah Gifford, Daniel Allen, Zaccheus Wing and Samuel Wing. The petition was unanimously referred to a committee "to confer with the petitioners and examine the foundation on which the town was settled, the manner and reasons of the grants of lands to the ministry, and whether the petitioners have any equitable right to the same and report." There were at this time "not less than sixty families of Friends or Quakers whose rates were not available for the support of the ministry." It appears then that collections were not enforced according to law, and that those who attended Friends' meeting even claimed that they had a just right to the ministerial lands. Both claims were however negatived at the public meeting.

II. JOHN'S GRANDCHILDREN.

32. DEBORAH, a daughter of Ananias and Hannah Wing (15), married George Weekes of Harwich. A short distance beyond the new cemetery in Harwich in an open field where there are a few ancient graves, is one with this inscription: "George Weekes born in Dorchester, Mass., A. D. 1683, came to Harwich, married Deborah Wing, Oct. 15, 1714 preached to the Indians and perished in a snow storm when an old man in the hollow one hundred rods south of this spot. He was a grandson of George Weekes, a Huguenot who fled to England, and came to America in 1630." It is said that this Mr. Weekes was an educated gentleman and for some time a missionary to the Potanumquit Indians. "The circumstances of his death" says Mr. Freeman "were painful His last days were clouded by lunacy; and in his wanderings he perished by exposure to cold in the low grounds south of the Harwich Academy, which is known from this casualty as Weekes' Hollow to the present day. A sermon delivered by him on the occasion of Mr. Taylor of Yarmouth being buried in a well was published." He had a family of five daughters and two sons, one of which died in infancy. His widow Deborah died Feb 9, 1725-6.

In 1725 "the town was divided into six removes for the purpose of giving all the families the benefit of a school during some portion of each year. Each of these removes was allowed to have the school kept up within it for a length of time proportioned to the number of families and of children belonging to it until the school went the whole circuit of the town." The first remove, within which Elnathan and his brother John resided, consisted of sixteen families with twenty-nine children, and was entitled to have the school for six months and one week; the second consisted of twenty-five families with fifty five children, and was entitled to the school for eight months and three weeks; the third, which contained twenty-two families with fifty-six children, was entitled to the school for eight months and three weeks, and so on until the whole six removes had received their first proportion. According to this arrangement it would take three years, six months and one week to go over the town. By his first wife Elnathan Wing had but one child, a daughter, who died May 14, 1722, when it was only eight days old. The mother died three days before this child, May 11, 1722. His second wife died Sept. 22, 1763, aged sixty-nine years. He himself was dead in 1772.

As this will was probated in 1773 he probably died in or near that year. In the cemetery at Brewster there is an inscription on one of the tombstones, which reads: "John Wing—1768," but as there were others of the name this may not refer to him.

She also died June 19, 1720, aged 29 and for his third wife he married, July 24, 1723, Rebecca Vickerie. His place of burial in the old burying ground at Brewster is marked by a head-stone with this inscription: "Here lies buried the body of Mr. John Wing, who died June 12, 1758, in the 78th year of his age." The place which he selected for his future abode was then several days' journey from the earlier settlements, but has since become the town of Montpelier, the capital of the State. The first inhabitant (Jacob Davis) had taken up his residence there three years before, and he was among the twenty-six freemen who voted at the organization of the town, March 29, 1791. He kept the first tavern opened in the present county, on the southeast bank of the stream which flows near the town. 3. Peleg, born March 12, 1764.

59. STEPHEN, a son of Samuel and Anne Barlow Wing (27), married Olive Hammond, Jan. 5, 1764.

*William Wing, writing from Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 3, 1874, says that traditions in his family made his ancestors come from Dorchester, Mass., to Windsor, Con.; that his grandfather's name was Samuel, who died in 1777, and that he had besides William's father, whose name was Moses, at least two other sons named Roger and Hezekiah. The coincidence of names and date with our account makes it probable that, notwithstanding some discrepancies (frequent in traditional records), he was a great-grandson of Samuel and Anne Barlow Wing, through Samuel, or possibly Stephen. He had a sister, whose name was Adeline, married to a Mr. Woodford, 73 years old in 1874, and residing in Hartford, Con.

60. EDWARD,* a son of Edward and Sarah Tucker Wing (28), was probably born in Sandwich, July 27, 1727, though in some accounts he is said to have been born in Dartmouth. His first wife, named Content, was of the Wood family in Dartmouth, and was born 9th month, 7, 1723. At an early period (before 1754) he removed to "Nine Partners" in Dutchess county, New York. His wife died there in giving birth to twins, and according to the records of the Monthly Meeting at Oblong, the infant children were taken into the families of Friends. He was by occupation a saddle and harness maker. On the 23d of 8th month 1758, he married Hannah, the daughter of David and Keziah Hoag of Nine Partners. She was born Nov. 22, 1735. In 1793 he removed to Queensbury (Glen's Falls) in Warren county, New York, and erected a building, a portion of

*In the following notices of Edward and Abraham Wing and their descendants, the writer has principally been indebted for his facts, and to a considerable extent for his language (he prefers generally when using original authorities to use as far as convenient the exact words of the writers), to A. W. Holden, M. D., of Glen's Falls, who having relinquished his original design of publishing a history of the Wings of Glen's Falls and vicinity, generously placed his numerous manuscripts on the subject at the disposal of the present writer. We have also been much assisted by consulting "The History of the Town of Queensbury (Glen's Falls), in the State of New York, with biographical sketches of its distinguished men, etc., by A. W. Holden, M. D., Albany, N. Y., 1874."

61. ABRAHAM, a son of Edward and Sarah Tucker Wing (28), married, about 1741, Anstis, the daughter of William Wood of Dartmouth, who was born 9, 7, 1723. When he was about 23 years of age he removed to a place in Dutchess county, New York, called "The Oblong."*

*In the disputes between the States of New York and Connecticut respecting boundaries, there was a strip of land, 580 rods wide, which extended along the eastern side of the counties of Dutchess, Putnam and a portion of Westchester which was finally conceded to New York. From its shape it was called "The Oblong," and one place in Dutchess County soon appropriated and still bears the name. As the titles to these lands could be made especially secure, as well as for other reasons, the rush of immigration upon them was very considerable about this time from the eastern Provinces. A Society of Friends was established there as early as 1744, which met alternately at the Oblong and at Nine Partners. Smith's History of Dutchess County, p. 409.

Among the legal papers mentioned above (No. 28), is one dated July 6th, 1745, in which he gives a bond to pay 270 pounds to "William Wood, a glasher of Dartmouth," and in another, dated May 19th, 1755, he is called a "taylor," in another, dated July 6th, 1745, "William Wood of Dartmouth, glasher, for and in consideration of the sum of six hundred and twenty pounds current money of New England, old tennor paid by Abraham Wing of Oblong, in the county of Dutchess and province of New York, Tailor," conveys to the latter a piece of land in the Oblong containing about 180 acres. On the 29th day of May, 1762, a patent was granted for the town of Queensbury* to twenty-three petitioners. In the month of June following, Abraham Wing purchased of a number of these patentees, and for a nominal sum, all their right and interest in the patent, and in August the township was surveyed and divided into sections. These were distributed by lot, and deeds of partition were executed which gave to each one a legal title to his claim. In this division Abraham Wing came into possession of two of the sections, upon which the principal portion of the village of Glen's Falls has since been built. He was subsequently granted by the proprietors a lot of ten acres containing the valuable water privileges at the Falls, on the north side of the river, in consideration of his erecting at that point a grist mill and a saw mill. In 1766 he removed his family and dependents, and with some other pioneers commenced the settlement of the town of Queensbury. The first town meeting was held in the following May, at which he was elected supervisor an office which he filled for nearly twenty years, during which time he was the merchant, the lawyer, the minister and the innkeeper of the place in one person. The first religious meetings in the place were held in his log residence. Permission was given him and his friend, James McKinney, "to have some care and oversight" of such meetings "once a week, on each First Day at twelve o'clock," by the Monthly Meeting of the Society of Friends at Nine Partners, in Dutchess county, the 19th of the 3d month, 1767; and they were required "once in three months, or as often as they can, to make report to this Monthly Meeting how the meeting is kept up and conducted, and what satisfaction they have in meeting together in that great and necessary duty." The early meetings of the Friends at Glen's Falls were for some time under the superintendence of the Monthly Meeting at "The Oblong" and at "Nine Partners," in Dutchess county but from a "removal certificate" which was granted to Abraham Wing, dated 1st month, 16, 1766, we infer that near that date this subordination was broken off. He, with his family, suffered serious losses during the struggle for Independence chiefly through appropriations and requisitions made by the American army, and for which no adequate compensation was ever received. His patriotism was unquestionable, though he and many of like religious principles were not unfrequently misunderstood for not sustaining more actively the military movements. He remained a consistent and earnest member of the Society of Friends until the close of life, and his remains, with those of many first settlers of the town, repose in the little burial ground where the old Quaker meeting-house stood, in accordance with the usage of the members of that sect in those times, without tablet or monument. He died at Glen's Falls, 5th month, 3, 1795. His will was dated "20th day of 9th month, 1794," and was proved May 27, 1795. It bequeathed a house and farm containing 342 acres, with stock, farming utensils and household furniture. His wife, Anstis Wood, died 29th of 5th month, 1807.

*The name of Queensbury was after the Revolution changed to that of Glen's Falls. For some time it went by the name of Wing's Falls, and many were dissatisfied with the change by which the principal founder and "patroon" of the place was deprived of the honor of the name.

She was a noted preacher among the Orthodox Friends. She had no children, but after the death of her brother Edward's first wife she took under her charge his son Thomas, who lived with her both in Sandwich and at Oblong.

64. JEDEDIAH, a son(?) of Edward and Sarah Tucker Wing (28), was certainly a grandson of Daniel and Deborah Dillingham Wing, and we see no place in which he can be put except among Edward's children, about the number and the names of whom there is some uncertainty. He was mentioned as early as 1735, with John (son of John and Experience Wing, No. 51), Abraham and Edward Wing, on the records of the Monthly Meeting at Oblong as the head of a family. He was the owner of a considerable property there. The name of his wife was Eliza.*

*In the legal papers before mentioned (No. 28), in the possession of Asahel Wing of Fort Edward, Jedediah Wing is mentioned as the owner of lands in the Oblong contiguous to those of Abraham Wing.

67. SAMUEL, a son of Samuel and Dorothy Wing (29), married Hepzibah, the daughter of Thomas Hathaway of Dartmouth.* He resided at Sandwich.

68. BARNABAS, a son of Samuel and Dorothy Wing (29), married, 7th month, 9, 1753, Anna Gifford of Falmouth, Barnstable county, Mass. This was probably the Barnabas who is reported to have been "born in or near New Bedford in the year 1731." The latter was twice married. By his first marriage he had seven children, among others a daughter who married Mr. Howland, and their children are now living in New Bedford, Mass. His second wife was Jane Merrihew of New Bedford. He was a merchant, and near the close of the War for Independence had valuable

*The mother of Hepzibah, the wife of Thomas Hathaway, was the daughter of Mary Starbuck of the Island of Nantucket, who has generally been regarded as the first white person born on that Island, and the first who in New England professed that form of faith which is adopted by the Friends. She was "convineed" under the preaching of Thomas Chalkley and Thomas Storey. In Macey's History of Nantucket (p. 59) it is recorded: "There was in this Island one Nathanael Starbuck, whose wife was a wise, discreet woman, well read in the Scriptures, and not attacheed unto any sect, but in great reputation throughout the Island for her knowledge in matters of religion, and an oracle among them on that account, insomuch that they would not do anything without her advice and consent." shipping destroyed by the British. Soon after that war he emigrated to Kentucky, where he continued until his death, in 1815, at the age of eighty four. His closing years were spent with his son in Greenville, Muhlenburgh county. He had by his second marriage at least one son named Charles F. Of his daughters one married Mr. Allen of Frankfort, Ky.; another Dr. Nelson of Knoxville, Tenn., and another Mr. Hodge of Tennessee.

72. BENJAMIN, a son of Zacchens and Content Swift Wing (30), married for his first wife Peace Gifford probably of Dartmouth, and removed after his father's death (about 1784) and the divison and settlement of the paternal estate in Sandwich, in the spring of 1800, with his son Adam, to Sidney, Kennebec county, in what was then the Province of Maine. After the death of his first wife, which soon followed the birth of her third child, Benjamin married Mary Hoxie of Sandwich, and had by her five children. He died Nov. 10, 1818, aged 77 years, and his wife died Feb. 20, 1824. The names of his children were Anna, born July 28, 1769, and died Sept. 7, 1809; Adam, born April 7, 1771; Peace; Zaccheus; Mary, born June 9, 1783; Susanna, born Sept. 16, 1785, and Christiana, born Sept. 24 1790.

2. James, born Sept. 10, 1756.
3. Eli Snow, born March 30, 1759.
4. Isaiah, born July 26, 1761.

6. Nathan, born Jan. 20, 1765.
7. Enoch, born March 15, and baptized March 27, 1768.

At an early period he removed to Conway, Berkshire county, Mass., where he must have been one of the earliest settlers. The precise date of his arrival there is not given, but from J. G. Holland's History of Western Massachusetts we learn that the town of Conway originally belonged to Deerfield, and had no settlers until 1763. It was first called Southwest, and was incorporated June 16, 1767. His first wife died soon after his settlement there, and not long afterwards he married Abigail Isham. By her he had eight children, viz: John, born April 24, 1768, (this date, though given by the family, can hardly be accurate), Peter again, William, Oliver, Abigail, and three who died in infancy. By a third wife, Jane Trescott, he had three more children, viz: Lovina, Roxana and Freeman, born Jan. 12, 1800. He resided about three miles from the village of Conway, on a farm of about 150 acres, tolerably fertile, on a plateau on the summit of a hill. The places where his house and barn were situated are easily determined from the remnants of walls and ditches which once must have been at their base, and from some trees which remain from an orchard. The property has now passed out of the family. He, however, remained on it until his death, which took place about 1822, when he was not less than 98 years of age. He possessed extraordinary health and activity, as he was said never to have been sick and to have been engaged on the day he died in hard work in severe winter weather.

86. JAMES, the second son of John and Mary Knowles Wing (38), had four sons, viz: John, Nathan, Benjamin and Isaac.

87. BARNABAS, a son of John and Mary Knowles Wing (38), resided on his father's farm in Harwich (Brewster), a short distance east of the present village.

The house in which he and one or two generations before him lived is a large, long and unpainted building, a story and a-half high, covered on each side, as well as on the roof, with shingles, and surrounded by a number of smaller buildings covered in like manner, and in the centre of a large and beautiful farm. It is supposed to be not less than 50 years old, and possibly to have been built by John, the father of Barnabas. During the occupancy of the latter it was kept as an inn. He married Hannah Berry, and lived to be over 80 years of age. According to an inscription on a tombstone in the graveyard at Brewster his wife "Hannah died Nov. 28, 1795, aged 50 years and six days."

The Probate Courts of Harwich make him the first in the order of four brothers, viz: David, Thomas, Joseph and John; but the town records of births give the order and dates as we have given them in No. 40. He is said to have had a residence, for a time at least, in Dennis, Barnstable county, Mass. They had twelve children, viz: three sons, David, John and William, and nine daughters, Jedidah (who married a Chase), Thankful (who married Enoch Chase), Temperance (who married Isaac Eldridge), Hannah (who married John Hammond), Tamzin (who married Isaac House), Sylvia (who married William Gardner), Abigail (who married Alpheus Adams), Rebecca (who remained unmarried), and Elizabeth, of whom we have no account. The father, David, died about 1806.

III. STEPHEN WING'S GREAT-GRANDCHILDREN.

98. SIMEON, the oldest son of Ebenezer Wing (41), married Mary Allen of Falmouth, Mass., (born March 3, 1726, and died Feb. 25 1808), and appears to have been prominent in the public affairs of his native town. At a public meeting, Nov. 11, 1774, the doings of the Provincial Congress were approved of, and Simeon Wing and four others were appointed "to consider the recommendations of the Provincial and Continental Congresses, and report at a future meeting." At another meeting, Feb 1, 1775, he was chosen with others "to see that the recommendations of the Congresses were carried into execution; and in 1780, March 8th, the town voted that he, with six others, "be a committee to take under consideration the Constitution agreed upon by the Delegates of the people, and transmitted to the towns for their acceptance." On the 9th of October, 1787, he removed to Wayne in what was then the Province of Maine, now in Kennebec County. He died Feb. 5, 1794, and his wife died Feb. 25, 1808.

107. GIDEON, a son of William and Mary Wing (47), resided at Duxbury, Mass., but followed a seafaring life, and at the commencement of the Revolutionary War was on a voyage to England. He contrived, however, to find his way to America, and soon enlisted as a soldier in the Patriot Army. He was present at the Battle of Monmouth, N J., and other battles, and was a prisoner for some years before his death. At the close of the War, or soon after, he settled first at Hallowell, Kennebec county, Maine, and afterwards at Vassalborough, twelve miles up the Kennebec River. He died Feb. 27, 1821, aged 76 years, 9 months and 16 days. He is supposed to have been the Joseph Wing who went from Rochester, Mass., to Montpelier, Vt. If so he was the owner of a farm northeastward of that town, on the road to Calais, near the old cemetery which once constituted a part of his property, and was sold by him, for burial purposes, July 21, 1794. 114. TABITHA, a daughter of Jabez and Anna Spooner Tobey Wing (55) married Jonathan, a son of Isaac and Sarah Sherman Handy of New Bedford, Mass. Their children were Caleb, Jonathan, Mercy, Grace, Priscilla and Eleanor.

115. MARY, a daughter of Jabez and Anna Spooner Tobey Wing (55), married Edward, the son of Isaac and Sarah Sherman Handy, and had thirteen children, viz: Ansel, Joseph, Jabez, Isaac, John, Pardon, Sarah, Leonard (born July 10, 1807), Anna, Thankful,* Polly, Edward and Nye.

*In a History of the "Walkers of Old Plymouth Colony and their Descendants," it is recorded that "Walter Walker, who was born Dec. 10, 1749, and died in Macedon, Wayne county, N. Y., March 26, 1844, in the 95th year of his age, married Thankful, the daughter of Jabez and Anna Wing, who died in October, 1825. He was a blacksmith, and had seven children. He removed from Smithfield, Rhode Island, to Macedon, where he lived many years, a member of the Society of Friends." As Jabez Wing had no daughter of that name of whom we have any account, it is probable that this note refers to his granddaughter by Mary Handy.

116. DAVID, a son of David and Sarah Parker Wing of Montpelier, Vermont (56), received the best education which the common schools of that period afforded; but this was much improved by his own efforts. His scholarship and literary accomplishments finally became distinguished throughout the entire State. He taught the second school of the town, which was opened probably the same year he removed with his father from Rochester to Montpelier (about 1790). Within two years after this he was elected Town Clerk, and during the next twelve years the offices of Town Agent, Town Representative, Judge of the County Court and Secretary of State were crowded upon him in rapid succession. Even while he held the offices of Side and Chief Judge of the County Court he was chosen the Town Representative, and four years afterwards (1802) both Secretary of State and State Treasurer. It is seldom that any man receives such numerous and unequivocal marks of his popularity and the confidence of his fellow-citizens. In 1792 he married Hannah, the second daughter of Colonel Jacob Davis, said to have been a lady of unusual personal attractions and moral excellence.* "In person he was of a medium height, with a good form, fine head, shapely features and an animated countenance, all made more attractive and winning by the dignified affability of his

*In Thompson's History of Montpelier an aged lady is said to have related a characteristic anecdote: "I will remember," she said, "the first silk dress that was ever purchased and brought into Montpelier. It was at a meeting late in the year 1803, held in a new barn owned by Colonel Davis, that Mrs. Wing, the wife of Judge David Wing, came in with it on, and made quite a sensation among us; but she being so good a woman, and putting on no airs about it, we did not go to envying her. We thought it extravagant, to be sure; but as her husband had just been elected Secretary of State, and might wish to take her abroad with him, we concluded at length that the purchase might be perhaps, after all, quite a pardonable act."

manners." It is said of him that "he would correctly and rapidly draw up any kind of document, report a despatch or a legal instrument, and at the same time maintain a connected and lively conversation." The new charter of Montpelier was obtained from the Legislature of 1804 by his persistent efforts, and still exists as it was first drawn up in the beautiful chirography of Secretary David Wing, jr. While still holding this office, and in the midst of his usefulness and high promise, he was suddenly swept away by a malignant fever, Sept. 13, 1806. The names of his children indicate the classical tastes of the father and the estimation in which he held certain noted personages of history. They were: Debby Daphne, Christopher Columbus, Algernon Sidney, Marcus Tullius Cicero, Maria Theresa, David Davis, Caroline Augusta and Maximus Fabius. The two oldest daughters died young.

117. JOSEPH, the second son of David and Sarah Parker Wing (56), was chosen Town Clerk of Montpelier twenty-seven times, and was also for some time a Justice of the Peace. He had one son, Charles.

118. JOSIAH, the third son of David and Sarah Parker Wing (56), was by occupation a farmer, and was seven times elected one of the Select men of the town of Montpelier. He has a son, Joseph A., practicing law in Montpelier.

119. JAMES WING, probably connected with the branch of the family in Rochester, Mass., resided in Rochester, Vermont, and served as a Representative in the Legislature.

120. THOMAS, a son of Edward and Content Wood Wing (60), was born at Oblong, in Dutchess county, New York, about 1750, but went, when only a child, after the death of his mother, to live with his aunt Jemima (Shaw), first at Sandwich and then at Oblong. In early life he made some whaling voyages, married, Nov. 5, 1775, Mercy Dakin of Fairfield, Connecticut, removed to Duanesburgh, Schenectady county, New York,* where he purchased and for the remainder of his life remained on a farm, was a much esteemed elder among his brethren of the Society of Friends, and died there at the age of 72 years. He had five sons and five daughters, viz: Joseph, Benjamin, Edward, Abel and David, Beulah, Phebe, Lydia, Mary and Lucy.

121. ABRAHAM THOMAS, a son of Edward and Content Wood Wing. (60), after the death of his mother at his birth, was taken into the family of Abraham and Mary Thomas, was named from this foster father, married and had four sons, viz: William, Seneca, Abraham and Thomas.

122. RUSSELL, a son of Edward and Content Wood Wing (60) was taken from his birth under the care of William and Elizabeth Russell, received their name, and was much favored by his uncle Abraham. He married and lived at Glen's Falls, and had one son named William Russell, who was born June 15, 1791.

123. JOSEPH, a son of Edward and Hannah Hoag Wing (60), married, Aug. 31, 1797, Irene, the daughter of Daniel and Finch Phelps, who was born Feb. 27, 1779. He died at Duanesburg (where many of his descendants still reside) Nov. 24, 1838, and his wife Aug. 29, 1851.

*Some traditions have given occasion to the assertion that Thomas married, 11, 3, 1772. Beulah, the daughter of Jabez and Deborah Delins of Rochester, Mass., and that he removed from Sandwich to Dutchess county in 1779. The family records, which we have preferred to follow, give the facts as above.

7. Christiana, born at Duanesburg Jan. 18, 1816.

124. JOHN, a son of Edward and Hannah Hoag Wing (60), married Phebe Terrell of New Milford, Conn. The following obituary notice, slightly abridged, and taken from a newspaper published in Mount Vernon, Knox county, Ohio gives the principal facts of his life: "Died, at the residence of his son in-law, H. Sherwood, in Mount Vernon, on the 30th day of April, 1865, John Wing, Esq., in the 86th year of his age. The deceased was born at Quaker Hill, Dutchess county, New York. His father removed to Glen's Falls when he was only fourteen years of age but in 1817 he came to Mount Vernon and resided there continuously until his death. He was married in 1802 to Phebe Terrell of New Milford, Connecticut, who still survives. He was a man of most exemplary life and unblemished character. Possessed of a strong and vigorous intellect, his opinions were always respected and had much influence. In politics he was always liberal, but never fanatical. During the late rebellion he had a strong anxiety for the salvation of the Union, and a never failing confidence that it would be saved and the insurrection would be quelled. In the success of the Union army he seemed to feel that his highest earthly hopes were realized. He died leaving five children, one son, residing about one mile from Mount Vernon, and four daughters." His wife died on the 25th of December, 1866, aged 87 years.

125. CONTENT, a daughter of Edward and Hannah Hoag Wing (60), married Roger Steadwell, a farmer.

126. ABIGAIL, a daughter of Edward and Hannah Hoag Wing (60), was killed by lightning at the age of thirteen.

127. SARAH, a daughter of Edward and Hannah Hoag Wing (60), married a gentleman named Hewson, and resided in the West.

128. HANNAH, a daughter of Edward and Hannah Hoag Wing (60), married Roger, a son of Roger and Elizabeth (Hare) Haviland, who was born 3d month, 11, 1765, and died 3d month, 10, 1854. He had four sons, viz: David, born 4, 13, 1785, and died 12, 21, 1862; Solomon, born 3, 7, 1788, and died 4, 2, 1846; Joseph, born 7, 31, 1792, and Roger, born 9, 13, 1797.

129. PHEBE, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis Wood Wing (61), married, at Quaker Hill, Dutchess county, N. Y., Nehemiah, the eldest son of Nehemiah and Dinah Hopkins Merritt of the Oblong in Dutchess county, N. Y. They lived at Nine Partners, and had eleven children.

130. SARAH, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis Wood Wing (61), married Ichabod, the second son of Nehemiah and Dinah H. Merritt, who went with Abraham Wing in the first settlement of Queensbury, was chosen Collector at the first town meeting there, filled various offices in that town, and erected the first framed house there, which was burned, with most of the houses and mills in town, during the advance of Gen. Burgoyne. They then returned to Nine Partners, where they continued to reside. They had three children, viz: Joseph (the first white child born at Glen's Falls), born 12, 17, 1766, died 11, 15, 1826; Deborah, died 3, 6, 1820 (unmarried), and Mary.

131. HANNAH, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis Wood Wing (61), married the third of the three sons of Nehemiah and Dinah H. Merritt, resided in Dutchess county, and had one daughter, who is said to have married Asa Lyon of that county. Dr. Holden thinks this is a mistake, and that there was really no issue of this marriage *

*These three sons of Nehemiah Merritt were reputed to be descendants of Mr. Thomas Merritt, who was born about the year 1685, emigrated from England or Wales and settled at Rye, Westchester county, N. Y. He had three sons, Joseph, Thomas and Nehemiah, of whom Joseph went to Nova Scotia, and left children; Thomas removed to Canada, and was the ancestor of the late Hon. Wm. H. Merritt, one of the projectors of the Welland Canal, and of another of the name residing at St. Catharine, in Ontario, and a member of the Dominion Parliament; and Nehemiah, who settled at Quaker Hill, Dutchess county, N. Y., was a blacksmith and a person of mark and consideration, especially among the Friends.

132. BENJAMIN, a son of Abraham and Anstis Wood Wing (61), was born at Quaker Hill, Dutchess county, N. Y., married, at the Oblong Meeting House, Thankful, the daughter of Caleb and Mercy Lockwood of Westchester county, N. Y., who was born 10, 22, 1746, and died 10 22, 1814. He was one of the original settlers of Queensbury in 1765, and his name appears on the records of that town in 1767. From that date onward for about forty years he was prominently active in all public affairs, and held some of its most important offices. He died June 19, 1824.

THEIR CHILDREN.

1. Hannah, born 10, 7, 1771.
2. Rachel, born 7, 5, 1773.
3. Nehemiah, born 5, 2, 1776.
4. Sarah, born 3, 20, 1781.
5. Richard, born 6, 26, 1783, died Dec. 16, 1861.
6. Benjamin, born 8, 26, 1785, died Sept. 2, 1850.
7. Mahala, born 7, 10, 1788, died June 4, 1867.

133. DEBORAH, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis Wood Wing (61), married Daniel Jones, a brother of David Jones, so famous in American history as the betrothed lover of the hapless Jane McCrea. Daniel was one of the earliest settlers in Queensbury, and contributed much to the development of its water power and resources. He was himself a mill-wright and the part owner of a grist and saw-mill, and of islands in the river, which he afterwards conveyed to Abraham Wing, and one of which bears the name of Wing's Island to this day. At the outbreak of the Revolution he adhered to the royal party, and with other loyalists fled to Canada. The property which he left was confiscated and sold after the war. In a letter to his father-in-law he communicates the tidings of the death of his wife in child-bed, in Montreal March 28, 1782, and of the infant four months afterwards. After the war he settled at Brockville, Upper Canada, where he received from the Crown a large grant of land in compensation for his losses, and where his descendants still reside and are people of considerable influence. His son Richard was arrested during the war and imprisoned for a while at Albany as a Loyalist and Tory, but was released through the intercession of his more patriotic father-in-law, Abraham Wing.

134. PATIENCE, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis Wood Wing (61) married Phineas Babcock one of the earliest settlers of Qneensbury, who probably accompanied Abraham Wing when the latter first came to the town. For more than twenty years his name appears continuously on the town records as the bearer of various offices. He suffered much loss during the Revolutionary War, for which, in spite of his unquestioned patriotism, he received no compensation. At one time he lived at the head of the lake, but not far from 1790 he removed to St Albans where, about one mile west of the present village, he erected the first framed house in that vicinity. His home was adorned with shrubs and flowers planted by the hands of his wife, "a woman of refined taste and culture." He died about the year 1820, but his wife survived him about fifteen years. She died at the house of her son-in-law, Willard Jewell, Esq., of St. Albans, in the month of February, aged 84. Their grandchildren and great-grandchildren are numerous in St. Albans. Their children were: 1. Benjamin, who, married Salome Lane (had five children, viz: Sidney, Morey, Henry, Jane and Maria), and is now dead; 2 Polly, who married Francis Hogle, lived in Canada, had fifteen children and died some years since; 3 Betsey, who married Martin Merritt and had thirteen children; 4 Sarah, who, in 1805, married Willard Jewell of St Albans, who was living in 1871, but she died Feb. 26, 1870, aged 87 years having had thirteen children; 5 Harry, who married Rosina Huntoon, but died without issue; 6 Wood, who married Sophia Peer, lived for some years at St. Albans, and removed to Troy, N Y, where he died, having had four children; 7. Abraham; 8. Phebe, and 9. Patience.

135. CONTENT, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis Wood Wing (61) married, when she was but fourteen years of age, Jacob Hicks, who had the management of the mills belonging to Messrs. Jones & Wing. He died probably in the latter part of the year 1773 or the early part of 1774. He had two daughters, viz: Sarah, who married Amos Baldwin and had six children, and Anstis, who married first James Murray, and after his death Reuben Morgan, and had a numerous family. After the death of Mr. Hicks she married James Hickson (commonly written Higson), a thorough patriot, who was taken prisoner with Andrew Lewis, his brother-in-law and others, and taken to Canada. After running the gauntlet in the hands of the Indians they were rescued and confined for a while in prison, but through the influence of loyalist kinsmen they were kindly treated, and sent home at the close of the war. After his return he purchased and lived upon a farm a mile north of Glen's Falls. He and his wife adhered to the Quakers, used their language, and one who knew well "Aunt Tenty," as her husband used to call her, says that she "was a very chatty, agreeable person." She was an intimate friend and confidant of Jane McCrea, often exchanged visits with her, and after the massacre the Indians exhibited at her father's house "Jenny's scalp with its long tresses of golden hair." Hickson had two daughters and one son, the last of whom removed west.

136. ABRAHAM, a son of Abraham and Anstis Wood Wing (61), married, early in 1779, Mary McKee of White Creek, and lived at Glen's Falls. In 1781, when Major Carleton (a nephew of Sir Guy), at the head of a motley force of Europeans, Tories and some Indians, captured Forts Anne and George, word came across the river that they were destroying everything before them and sparing the lives of none. The inhabitants fled in great haste, but in the confusion Mrs. Mary Wing was left with two of her children alone. She is said to have taken these infant children and "fled to the recesses of the Great Cedar Swamp, which still borders with its dense undergrowth and tangled vegetation the eastern boundaries of the village." In quite as much danger from the wild animals and reptiles which abounded in the forest, she spent the night in efforts to keep her children from making a noise. She is said to have been a native of Scotland, and to have come to this country when she was but seventeen years of age. She is described as "a woman of fine presence and rare personal attractions, as well as of great courage and fitness to encounter the rough scenes of border life." She died April 6, 1831, aged 78 years.

7. Abraham, born Aug. —, 1791.

137. MARY, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis Wood Wing (61), some time before the Revolution, married Andrew Lewis, who came to Glen's Falls from New Milford, Connecticut. He resided at one time on what was called Wing's Island, where he escaped being killed or taken prisoner by the Indians at the Parke Massacre (about 1777) by the absence of any boat by which they could reach the Island, and by the fear of his rifle if they attempted to wade the river. He was, however, twice made a prisoner and taken to Canada, where the last time he remained to the close of the war. Numerous descendants of his still reside in the neighborhood. Their immediate children were: 1. Rachel, who married Jonathan Pitcher; 2. Russell; 3. Robert, who married a daughter of Nathanael Folsom; 4. Deborah, who married Hanner Palmer; 5. Mary, who married Timothy Nye; 6. Andrew; 7. Jemima; 8. Jane, who married a Winston; 9. Abraham; 10. Charles.

3. Abigail, born Feb. 1, 1801 or 1802.

*In several accounts this Matthew has been confounded with one of the same name, a son of Stephen Wing, who lived at the same time. Of Stephen's son Matthew we have no definite accounts, but the records of the family among the other Matthew's descendants leave no doubt respecting his parentage and children.

†There is no little confusion in the dates relating to the whole of the last century, on account of the greater or less prevalence of the two different modes of reckoning time, called the Old and the New

139. DANIEL, a son of Joseph Wing (62), removed, about 1775, to a place called "The Nine Partners," in Dutchess county, New York, where he had five children, viz: Brice, Zeviah, Abner, Patience and John.

140. JOHN, a son of Joseph Wing (62), married Jemima Shepherd at the Friends' meeting house in Dartmouth, Mass., Oct. 5, 1753. At an early period he became a resident, with Abraham, Edward and Jedediah Wing, of Dutchess county, New York. Jemima died 11th month, 28, 1816.

Style. By an act of Parliament all public documents after 1752 were required to have their dates correspond with the Gregorian Calendar, according to which the ecclesiastical and civil year commenced with the first of January instead of the 25th of March, as hitherto. Each month of each year during the eighteenth century commenced eleven days earlier than it would have commenced by the Old Style, and each month of the nineteenth century commenced twelve days earlier. Even before this enactment many had conformed to the Roman or New Style, and after it many adhered to the Old Style; and it is impossible always to understand which mode of reckoning was used in the accounts we meet with. And yet the whole of the months of January, February and the greater part of March of each year would be reckoned under the former year by the Old and under the new year by the New Style, and each month would be set back eleven or twelve days. In our record we have, where it was convenient, given the dates according to both these styles of reckoning in the usual manner; as, for instance, the birth mentioned above occurred, according to the legal year, in 1799, but according to the Old Style, it was in 1798; and as we are therefore uncertain which style was used, we record it in one of the forms usual in such cases: 1798-9.

Colonel Campbell of Revolutionary celebrity, was a clerk for the Circuit and County Court for more than half a century at Greenville, Muhlenburgh county, Ky. He was a Captain in the War of 1812, and served with distinction at the battle of the Thames and at other places. He raised and equipped his company of one hundred and two men, and reported for duty at Newport, Ky., a distance of 250 miles, in thirty days from the date of the call for men. When he was buried in 1861 it was with his old flag of 1812 around him, and although an army of four thousand confederate soldiers marched out of Greenville to pay respect to his memory, his wife declined the offer of the commander, General Buckner, to bury him with military honors. He had eight children, two sons and six daughters, viz: W. H. Campbell, who died in 1862; Jane Merrihew, who married the late Hon. Edward Rumsey, and died in 1868; one daughter who married Mr. Short of Greenville, Ky.; three daughters now living on the homestead in Greenville, Ky.; one daughter who married Mr. Patterson of Lexington, Ky., and Samuel M. After the death of his first wife, in 1860, Charles F. Wing married, in 1868, Elizabeth McKnight of Louisville, Ky., and he now resides in Owensborough, Daviess county, Ky.

142. DEBORAH, the oldest daughter of Paul and Abigail Wing Wing (71), married Joseph Hoxie, and had five children, viz: Samuel Wing, Hepzibah W., Joseph (born Dec. 2, 1765, and died Feb 22, 1856), Abigail W. and Newell. The last (Newell Hoxie) was at first a prosperous merchant in West Falmouth, Mass., but finally returned to Sandwich and became a farmer and an influential preacher among the Orthodox Friends. He is still living and able to attend to his usual employments, though much advanced in age.

143. HEPZIBAH, a daughter of Paul and Abigail Wing Wing (71), married Estes Newell of Lynn, Mass.

144. BEULAH, a daughter of Paul and Abigail Wing Wing (71), married Abijah Purington of Salem, Mass.

145. SAMUEL, a son of Paul and Abigail Wing Wing (71), married Anna Rogers of Marshfield, Mass., and had Abraham R., Stephen Rogers, Lindley Moore, Joseph Rogers, Mary, Beulah and Hepzibah.

146. CONTENT, a daughter of Paul and Abigail Wing Wing (71), married Henry Russell, a merchant, a worthy member of the Friends' Society and a highly esteemed citizen of Providence, Rhode Island, who died in the fifty-second year of his age, near the close of 6th month, 1815. He left at least two children, William and Henry.

147. LYDIA, a daughter of Paul and Abigail Wing Wing (71), married a Hussey, and had four sons, viz: Sylvanus, Samuel, George and William.

148. PAUL, a son of Paul and Abigail Wing Wing (71), married Anna Dennis of Portsmouth, Rhode Island, and was a teacher in "Sandwich Boarding School" for boys. This institution was for more than twenty years under his care, and had a salutary influence in training young men, some of whom have since attained distinction. The building in which it was conducted was twice consumed by fire, and after the second conflagration, a few years since, it was relinquished *

*In Winsor's "History of the Town of Duxbury," p. 312, it is said that Laura Ann, born in 1816, a daughter of Captain George Soule of Duxbury, Mass., married Paul Wing 2d of Sandwich. This is hardly consistent with the above account.

149. EBENEZER, a son of Paul and Abigail Wing Wing (71), had one daughter, Eliza Goold, who was for many years a teacher of a school at Apple Grove, and was the wife and widow of Asa S. Wing (408).

The family of Paul and Abigail Wing Wing (71), remained for some years unbroken at the paternal residence, near the spot which had been in the possession of Daniel Wing's descendants from the earliest settlement of Sandwich. Before the door of the present building is a granite stepping-stone on which has been cut for several generations the initials of the name of the heads of the family. There is a notice of the family in the published Journal of John Wigham under the date of 10th month, 1797, which is worthy of transcription: "On the seventh day rode to Paul Wing's where I lodged. In his family were five precious daughters, Hepzibah, Beulah, Content, Tryphosa and Lydia, and several sons who appeared hopeful, among whom with their worthy parents so sweet a spirit seemed to prevail that the house felt like a paradise."

The members of this family can best be described in the words which the grateful piety of Dr. Henry Russell has used in a reply to inquiries respecting a home he so long enjoyed. We have no inclination to abridge the account in any essential particulars, or to separate the notice of each individual from its general connection: "In extreme old age Paul Wing (69) became much enfeebled in mind, yet in all his conversation and life he exhibited the benevolence and kindness which were prominent in his better days. His wife Abigail also gave evidence of impaired reason for several years before her death. She was short of stature but well developed, and with a high forehead. Her benevolence and deep interest in every person she knew were plainly seen. A little colored boy adopted in the family received from her the affection of a mother, and none were allowed to relieve her of the care of this child as long as she could walk. The Marshpee Indians, who often visited her and were employed about the house, speak of her even at this late period (1874) with warm gratitude for the many tokens of kindness she and her family bestowed upon them. Unlike her, her eleven children were of more than medium height and weight, with large features, prominent Roman noses and strong, muscular development. The dignified carriage of Samuel, Paul, jr., and Ebenezer, dressed in Friend's attire, with their broad-brimmed hats, white cravats and standing collars, and seated in the gallery of the Friend's meeting house, usually made a strong impression upon all, and especially upon strangers. Paul, jr., Ebenezer and Lydia lived together on the old homestead, and in the same house where they were born, making one family for nearly half a century. During this time neither of them were married, and the property was possessed in common. When one had a new garment the other had one also, and usually of the same piece. Each had access to the same purse in great harmony and brotherly love. When Paul finally married Anna Dennis of Portsmouth, R. I., the estate remained undivided, Lydia and Ebenezer making one family and Paul and his wife another, the common dwelling house having been reconstructed for two families. The Quarterly Meetings which were annually held in Sandwich were occasions for the exercise of a large hospitality. The writer has known twenty-one Friends from Nantucket, besides many from other parts, to lodge there in one night. For more than thirty years on such occasions they were in the habit of giving up their beds to strangers and sleeping on coverlets in the attics, etc. In those days, before railroads were constructed in this region, and when people came with horses and carriages, it was no small labor to provide for all. Everything, however, was cheerfully done, and even the boys were ambitious to outdo their neighbors and cousins. The great east room, with high-backed chairs filled with the erect forms of these many Friends, was my first impression of Quakerism. I was required by my Aunt Lydia to be with her at the door when these strangers arrived, and (though I could not have been more than four or five years old) to shake hands with every one. The separations caused by the death, the marriages or the calls of business in this family of eleven children were occasions for much regret to the parents and the remaining portion of the household; and on the other hand the family greetings and reunions of relatives of several generations were seasons of extraordinary joyousness. Those of them whose relationship was remote, it was often said by observers, seemed to love each other more tenderly than nearer connections in other families. Paul, jr., was naturally reserved, sedate and firm, but kind and beloved. It was said of him by a citizen of Sandwich when he died that his equal was not left in town. Ebenezer was of a different temperament. At twenty five he was frequently complimented as the handsomest man in Sandwich. His cheeks were red, his eyes dark chestnut with a smiling expression that almost talked. He had large language, and was good at telling a story or giving a joke. His mirthfulness was so extreme that it was commonly said to be as good as a play to hear "Uncle Eben" relate what he had seen and heard. Content Russell was of the same temperament, and much resembled him in person. Her mind was well cultivated and stored with much reading, especially of the writings of Friends, though she was the least sectarian of any of the family. Her strong maternal affection made her a Christian mother and sister. Lydia Hussey, the last survivor and the most feeble of the family, was more like her brother Paul. Though for many years an invalid her slender frame and constitution encountered disease with remarkable energy and endurance. Her indefatigable labors in behalf of her aged mother, her two brothers and the youthful writer can never be forgotten and are recorded in Heaven. Most of the connection were devoted to agriculture, and were noted for having good farms, large orchards and a great variety of fruits. An order for twenty bushels of apples, of which no two half bushels should be of the same kind, was complied with without exhausting the variety of sorts. Many of the name, however, were distinguished for a mechanical genius. Ebenezer, at nineteen, while a journeyman at Pawtucket, was offered a salary of a thousand dollars a year if he would remain, but he chose rather to return to his parental home. His brother Samuel also, and his children, were remarkable for mechanical ingenuity. Most of the kindred have been much inclined to the acquisition of property especially of landed estate. The earlier families usually had a large number of children. Each of three generations in one line had not less than eleven, but of late the average has been not more than three or four to a family. Most of the progenitors were also long lived, a characteristic which has been better kept up. A short time before his death (1844) Paul Wing, jr., was visited at midday, and when he was wide awake, by what he looked upon as a remarkable vision of the Celestial City, which he was persuaded was no mere fancy, and which left in him an intense longing to depart. Ebenezer also, who was an Overseer in the Society of Friends, at the age of sixty-nine, two weeks before his death, while in a harvest field and resting under a tree, dreamed that he was in Heaven and had communion with his deceased brother and sister. The effect upon him was overpowering, and the same night he was attacked by the illness which two weeks later terminated his life (8th month, 17, 1859). He was at once satisfied that he was not long for this world, and he could hardly wait for the symptoms of approaching death. Lydia Hussey, the last of the children of Paul, sr., lived to the age of 79 years and two and a-half months, and died 10th month, 28, 1863." Her nephew, Dr. Henry Russell, the writer of the preceding account, who had seen her about ten days before, being in his bed at four o'clock in the morning, at his residence in New Bedford, dreamed that his room was illuminated and that he saw his mother, who had been deceased for more than ten years, meeting and greeting his Aunt Lydia. He awoke at once, noted the precise time, told his dream in the morning, and avowed his conviction that the two sisters were reunited in Heaven. A telegram soon informed him of the death of his aunt, and on going to the funeral (30 miles distant) he found that she had passed away precisely at the hour he had noted of his dream.

160. REUBEN, a son of Samuel and Hannah Sears Wing (75), went, about 1790, from Readfield, where his father resided, and was probably the first of the settlers in North Livermore, Androscoggin county, Maine. He married at an early age Hannah Smith, by whom he had three daughters, Polly Richardson, Naney Fuller and Susanna, and one son, Samuel, who died some years since leaving no surviving children. After the death of his first wife, Reuben

Wing married Lucy Weld, a native of New Hampshire, by whom he had eight children, viz: Walter W., Reuben, Peleg B., Hannah, Charles C., Susan, Mary A. and Lewis M. These all died in early life, with the exception of the oldest and the youngest. Reuben Wing is said to have acquired, in spite of early disadvantages, an extensive information, especially with respect to the Bible and religion. He was a member of the Baptist church, and died May 28, 1862, aged 90 years and six months, universally respected as a good man and a Christian.

His brother Bani went a few weeks afterwards to Havana for his effects and to settle up some business for him there.

165. JAMES, the second son of John and Abigail Snow Wing (85), resided with his father until the Revolutionary War, at the commencement of which he was nearly nineteen years of age. According to a record written by himself, he enlisted on the 1st of May, 1775, for eight months in the military service of the United Colonies, and went to Cambridge, near Boston, under Captain Robert Oliver, Major Moore, Lieut. Col Holden and Col. Ephraim Doolittle. He was in the Battle of Bunker's Hill from the commencement to the close. His regiment encamped on Winter's Hill, in General Sullivan's brigade. When his time expired, Oct. 31, he enlisted for one month in Captain Barnes' company, in Col. Nixon's regiment, stationed on the same hill as before. Some time in February 1776, he enlisted for one year under Sergeant James Davis, was sent to New Haven, thence on a sloop to New York City, was connected with a company under Captain (afterwards General) Wilkinson and a regiment under Colonel James Reed. After a brief stay in New York, his regiment was ordered to Canada, which it reached by water to Albany through lakes George and Champlain, by St. John's to Montreal. Wilkinson was there promoted and sent down the St. Lawrence, where he was taken prisoner and sent to Quebec. The command of the company then devolved upon the Second Lieutenant, Thompson Maxwell, until the end of the campaign. In August of the next year (1777) he enlisted for three months in Captain Abel Dinsmore's company of militia, in Colonel Woodbridge's regiment, marched from Conway to Bennington, Vermont, where he arrived soon after the battle, thence to Whitehall, New York, and to Brookfield, Mass. At this place he was stationed to guard some British prisoners who had been taken at or near Mount Hope. He then rejoined his company at Albany, sailed down the river to Tarrytown and marched to White Plains, New York. At the close of his term of enlistment there he was drafted to go to New London, Connecticut, for one month, which time he served out in Captain Abel Dinsmore's company, in the regiment of Colonel Porter of Hadley. The whole time which he thus served during the war for independence was two years and one month. On September 20th, 1781, he married Lydia Allis, born Dec. 25th, 1761, at Hatfield Hampshire county, Mass., and removed to Hinsdale, Berkshire county Mass., where he was engaged in farming during the remainder of his life. His wife died there Oct. 7, 1840, and he himself Aug. 11, 1841.

168. BANI, the fifth son of John and Abigail Snow Wing (85), was also a soldier in the war for independence. When only in his seventeenth year (1779) he enlisted in Captain Riee's company, belonging to Colonel Chapin's regiment. He subsequently served in a regiment commanded by Colonel Weston, which was engaged principally in the defence of the Hudson River, and was present with his company at the execution of Major Andre, Oct. 2, 1780.

His first wife was Lucy, the daughter of Lieutenant John Clary of Conway, whom he married in 1788. In June, 1795, he purchased, for three hundred pounds, one hundred acres of land on the Deerfield River in Wilmington Vermont, to which he afterwards made several additions. There his children were born and reared, and there his wife Lucy died Nov. 15, 1819. On the ninth of October, 1821, he married Thirza, the daughter of Benjamin Flint of North Reading, Middlesex county, Mass., and by this marriage had one son. In April 1837, he removed to Charlemont, Franklin county, Mass., where he died April 2, 1847, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. His wife Thirza survived him twenty-seven years, and on Decoration Day, May 30, 1873, a laurel wreath was prepared by the citizens of Charlemont and presented to her as the only surviving relict of the Revolutionary Army in that town. She died the next year, March 9, 1874, being ninety six years of age. Bani Wing was for more than a half century a communicant in the Congregational church and among the earliest to engage in the movements against intemperance and slavery. He was fond of reading, had acute perceptive powers and was full of genuine good humor. His character was unblemished, his authority in the family, and his temper in general society were mild and his judgment of others was always charitable. The clerk of the parish in the record of his death says of him: "He was a man true to his country and to his God."

For some time after that year he resided at Farmington, Franklin county, Maine, about seventy miles north of Portland, but from 1820 to the time of his death he lived at Abbott in Piscataquis county. His death took place April 10 1836, when he was in his seventy-second year. His wife survived him, and died in March, 1854, in the eighty second year of her age. She was buried at Abbott.

*Alexander Oliver belonged to a family in Conway, Mass., married Mary Warner, was a colonel in the Revolutionary War, was a member of the Society of Cincinnati, settled with a number of other officers at Belpre about 1791 and had four sons and seven daughters, viz: 1. Mary, who married Enoch Wing; 2. Lucretia, who married Levi Mansell, who went first to Cincinnati but afterwards to Marietta; 3. Betsey; 4. Launcelot, who married a Clark; 5. Sarah, who married a Mr. Austin, a lawyer in Lancaster, Ohio; 6. Lueinda, who married George Putnam, probably a farmer, and had a numerous family; 7. John, who lived first at Marietta, afterwards at Adams and finally at Piqua; 8. Alexander, who married Betsey Graham and lived at Piqua, and afterwards in Illinois; 9. Electra, who married Oliver Spence, who was stolen by the Indians and gave a narrative of his captivity which was published as a Methodist Sunday School book; he became a Methodist preacher, and still later was a judge in Cincinnati; his children, seven sons and a daughter, are of high respectability in that city, one of them having been its mayor for many years, and the daughter was the wife of Raphael Symmes, the Confederate admiral in the late Civil War; 10. Mahala, who married Calvin Shepherd, a brick mason at Gallipolis, Ohio; 11. David, a physician first at Cincinnati and afterwards at Blue Ball, Butler county, Ohio; 12. Elizabeth, who married Daniel Symmes, a judge of the Supreme Court of Ohio, who lived in Cincinnati, and with his brother Peyton and his near relative, John Cleves Symmes, was the owner of a large portion of land in and around that city at an early period of its settlement. He had no children, and his nephews inherited his property. His widow married a clergyman named Graham, and had a son who was also a clergyman.

was then a wilderness, but has since become the seat of a manufacturing town called Lowell. He himself, before he left it, gave a start to the village by setting up a store, some mills and other manufacturing establishments. On the death of his wife Mary (in 1812), he removed through an almost trackless forest in Western Pennsylvania and New York to Phelps, Ontario county, New York, where he married the widow of John Newhall, whom he had at an early day known as Beulah Stearns in Conway, Mass. He there became an extensive farmer, but soon connected with that business merchandising in various kinds of goods, which proved unprofitable on account of the fall of prices at the close of the war with Great Britain. He then returned to his farm about two miles from the village of Vienna, and in his declining years resigned his business to his son Freeman, resided in the village and died March 26, 1834, in the sixty fifth year of his age. He was a Justice of the Peace for many years in Ohio and in New York, and an elder in the Presbyterian churches of Phelps and Vienna, three times a member of General Assemblies of the Presbyterian church, and almost constantly an attendant upon the meetings of the Presbytery and Synod of Geneva. His first wife was the mother of all his children except the youngest. His second wife survived him and died about 1840.

She succeeded in passing them, but soon found that a whole pack were pursuing her. She, however, reached home, and gained time enough to unharness her horse and get with her grist within her door, while the horse ran for the woods. The wolves now climbed to the top of the log building, and soon made their appearance at an opening in the roof which had been left for the escape of the smoke, and were about to spring down to the room below. She hastily kindled a fire with the contents of her straw bed, and finding that this drove them back, she kept up a brisk fire all night, and when her straw and wood failed her she piled on the furniture and nearly everything combustible in the house, and thus succeeded in keeping the wolves at bay until morning, when they slunk away to the woods. Few men leave their scenes of activity more deeply mourned than he. For many years he filled offices of trust and honor in the town, and in all of them his duties were discharged with unerring faithfulness and integrity. The church of which he was a member has lost one of the brightest ornaments of the Christian profession. In the little family circle where he was so tenderly loved, where his presence was ever a source of happiness, and where his example was always one to be followed and emulated, his loss will indeed be a sad one."

Wing (116), graduated at Middlebury College in Vermont, in the class of 1820, studied divinity at Alexandria, Virginia, in the class of 1826, was ordained a deacon and a priest in the Protestant Episcopal Church by Bishop Chase, and went at once to Worthington, Franklin county Ohio, where the Bishop was then establishing a Theological Seminary in connection with the diocese of Ohio. In 1828, when pupils in elementary studies had increased, an act of the Legislature was obtained by which the President and Professors were constituted the Faculty of a college under the name of Kenyon College, and the institution thus modified and enlarged, was transferred from Worthington to Gambier, Knox county, Ohio but remained in the same ecclesiastical connection. To the interests of this institution he devoted himself with all his heart. Bishop McIlvaine said of him, that "To him more than to any man living the subsequent success of these institutions was due. On him the college relied for the conduct of its embarrassed and complicated interests. To his eminent faithfulness, wisdom, self devotion patience and constancy the diocese and its college and seminary are deeply indebted. His outward labors were severe, but the interest and anxiety which he felt were greater than could be expressed. Not more than once in the history of any institution does a friend appear like him, entirely disinterested and thoroughly devoted to its welfare, willing to spend and actually spending his last and all his days in its behalf." For four years (1826-29) he was tutor in the college, a Clerical Trustee from 1831 to 1840 a Professor of the Latin language and literature from 1838 to 1846, of Ecclesiastical Polity in the seminary from 1846 to 1856, and of Ecclesiastical History from 1837 to 1863 and by an honorary appointment to the time of his death. During nearly all this time he was the Secretary, the Treasurer and the financial agent of the college. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity in acknowledgment of his literary scholarship and profound theological learning. One who sat under his instruction says of him: "We well remember how much we admired the refined beauties of his style of composition in his sermons; every thing was simple, polished and graceful, breathing ever the most devout piety and Christian humility." His declining health compelled him a short time before his death to present his resignation of his professorship to the Board of Trustees, and their acceptance of it was accompanied with an honorary appointment which still secured his name and counsels for the seminary, and he lived long enough to rejoice in the success that attended the introduction of his successor. On the 9th of April, 1835, he married Frances Augusta Evans, who was born

Feb. 11, 1811, at Royalton, Vermont, and died Dec. 9, 1879. He himself died Feb. 26, 1863, in the 65th year of his age.

He was but a babe in 1781, when, on Carleton's invasion, his mother fled with him to the swamp. In his youth he went to a Quaker school in the village, where he and the other children of the family probably received all the early education which was possible for them at the time. In 1802 the town records show that "he carried on a mixed business of merchandising and hotel keeping for a number of years." In 1809 the family records show that he lived at Sandy Hill, where he also kept a tavern until about 1814, when he was residing in Queensbury. Soon after this he removed to Fort Edward and resided in the lower part of the village. There he engaged in mercantile and lumbering business, in which he amassed a large property. He was said to have been "a man of excellent judgment, energetic and tenacious of purpose. He was for many years considered the leading man of the place." He married first, on the 25th of July, 1803, Rhoda Stewart of Kingsbury, Washington county, N. Y., and after

ABRAHAM, a son of Abraham and Mary McKie Wing (136), like his brother, Daniel Wood, was educated at the school of his native village, and was early engaged as a partner in the mercantile business at Emerson's Corners, in the town of Wilton, Saratoga county, N. Y. He was afterwards associated at various times and in different enterprises with Walter Geer, jr., George Sanford, William McDonald and others who have been distinguished for their their thrift and energy in the affairs of the town. With the opening of the Northern Canal and the construction of the Glen's Falls feeder, the resources of the surrounding region were at once developed. Mr. Wing had the forecast and judgment to bring to market the splendid pines with which the tract around Brant Lake abounded. As the agent of the brothers Alanson and Norman Fox he devised the present system of river driving and booning by which the mills of this town have been supplied with materials for an immense manufacturing industry. The country in the immediate vicinity had been stripped of their original forests, and the water-power of the Falls was regarded as nearly worthless. He soon gave a new impulse to the whole lumbering business of the Hudson and its affluents. The obstructions in the outlet of Brant Lake were removed, a dam and sluice-way were constructed and a new field of labor was opened. The immense forests of the northern part of the State were made tributary to the new enterprise of the capitalists. From a trusted business agent Mr. W. soon became a partner and ultimately the sole proprietor of these large lumber interests. About the year 1853 he disposed of his business and retired from his more active employments. He was then accounted one of the wealthiest men of this region and his time and talents have found sufficient engagement in the management of his large estate. He was in polities an earnest and energetic leader of the Democratic party in his town and county, though he never seemed to seek office for himself. He was an untiring friend and an unyielding opponent, "opinionated, self-reliant and determined. Public spirited and liberal, every church and public enterprize received his generous contribution. At the outbreak of the Civil War he was among the heaviest subscribers to the fund for the relief of the families of the soldiers and to the raising of bounties and recruits for the army." He was married three times. His first wife was Abigail Barnard of Townsend, Vermont, who died Aug. 19, 1846; his second Angeline B

Vail, the widow of Alexander Robertson of New York, who died Jan. 5, 1853, aged 42 years; and his third Mrs. Frances A. (Bowman) Glass. He had no children except by his first wife. He was for years subject to painful and frequent attacks of disease, in spite of a vigorous and well-preserved constitution, and he died at his own home June 13, 1873, aged 81 years. In 1846 he sold this property, and has since held himself aloof from business, residing a portion of his time in Newark and the remainder upon his farm. In 1856 he was appointed on Governor Pollock's staff with the commission of a Lieutenant Colonel. In the late Civil War he served from May 1861 first under General Banks in the Shenandoah Valley, where he contracted the inflammatory rheumatism, which finally proved fatal to him. Soon after leaving college he went to Michigan, then a Territory recently formed from the region northwest of the Ohio, and there served as a sheriff at the difficult period soon after the war with Great Britain, when smuggling was prevalent along the western lakes and borders. For several years he resided at Detroit, and was chosen twice as a delegate in Congress to represent the Territory from 1827 to 1832. During his last term he removed to what was then French Town (now Monroe), near the mouth of the River Raisin. His wife Harriet died there Dec 29, 1836. She was the mother of all his children, but after her death he married, in 1838 Mrs. Mary, the widow of a Mr. Stanley of Tennessee. She remained but a short time after his death in that town and resided subsequently most of her time with her sister, Eliza Noble, in Monroe and Detroit. She married a second time a Mr. Bulkley of Williamstown, Mass., but he soon died, and she returned to her former home and died at Detroit Jan. 30, 1871, aged 77. Her children belonged to her first marriage, and were Walter and Austin, who grew to adult age, but died unmarried about 1836, the first at Elyria, Ohio, and the last at Louisville, Kentucky. She was for many years a communicant in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and much engaged in charitable work.

320. MARY, a daughter of Enoch and Mary Oliver Wing (170), married about 1815, Cyrus Spooner, a physician in Marietta, Ohio, who, after his marriage, removed up the Muskingum River and had one son named Paul, born Jan. 7, 1818. Elizabeth Abbey* was educated at the Utica Seminary, New York, and married, Oct. 25, 1848, Rev. Hannibal Stanley, a step-son of her uncle, Austin E. Wing. He was settled at Leroy, Genesee county, New York, and she died in that place in August, 1849. Mr. Stanley married again, still lives and is the father of a numerous family. He had one child, a daughter, by his first marriage, who died in 1858, at the residence of her grandparents in Monroe. Charles Wing graduated, in 1846, at the University of Michigan, studied law and was admitted to practice at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1849. In 1866 he removed to Savannah, Georgia, then to New York, and finally (1867) to Detroit, where he still resides. He married, Sept. 19, 1850, Julia F. Mygatt and had one daughter, Julia Elizabeth, who was born Oct. 23, 1851, and died while attending the Female Seminary at Troy, N. Y., June 17, 1867. After the death of his first wife, Charles Noble married Caroline G. Van Buren at Penn Yan, N. Y., May 31, 1854. She died in Detroit in 1867, and on the 21st of July, 1870, he married at White Plains, Westchester county, N. Y., Frances E. Martine. They and concluded his legal education at the Reeves Law School in Northampton, Mass. He settled in Monroe, and practiced law in the courts of Michigan until 1845, when he was appointed one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the State. In 1851 he was chosen Chief Justice, an office which he resigned in 1856 in order to enter upon the duties of a General Counsellor for the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad Company. In this employment he remained until the close of his life. Those who composed the Bar of Detroit when he filled the office of Circuit Judge entertained for him an affection and reverence of the strongest character. In the capacity of Chief Justice he was called upon to try the intricate and exciting conspiracy case of the burning of the Michigan Central railroad depot, in which the patience, skill, learning and courtesy he displayed were the admiration of all, and are spoken of with delight even to the present day. Although, from a regard to his position on the Bench, he was seldom drawn into the more heated controversies of the political world, he was a firm adherent of the Democratic party, and his counsel had much to do in the management of its affairs in the State. Socially he was always lively, full of humor and ready with an inexhaustible fund of anecdote; though high toned and chivalrous in mixed society, his extreme diffidence made him shrink from the higher positions to which he was often urged to aspire. The illness which caused his death came upon him suddenly, and during more than a year of severe agony he exhibited the utmost fortitude. He died March 11, 1879, in the seventy-first year of his age. Representatives of the Bar from Detroit, Toledo and various towns in the State of Michigan united with that of Monroe in attending his funeral, and the marks of respect which were shown at the meetings of lawyers in those places were of a character unprecedented in that region. In Detroit the resolutions reported by a committee composed of Governor Robert McClelland, Judge H. Emmons, D. Bethune Duffield and William A. Moore were highly eulogistic. He was a member for many years of the Presbyterian church of Monroe, and though well read in the scientific speculations of the day, he often avowed his unwavering faith in evangelical religion. He married May 2, 1831, Eliza A., the daughter of Colonel John Anderson, a Scotchman, one of the original settlers of Monroe, Michigan. She was born Dec 17, 1808, and died Dec. 16, 1854, aged 46.

He has also been for a long time a professor of Legal Science in the Western Reserve College at Hudson, Ohio.

324. FREEMAN SNOW, a son of Enoch and Mary Oliver Wing (170), was educated at Geneva Academy (since Hobart College), and commenced farming with his father about two miles southwest of what was then the village of Vienna (now Phelps), Ontario county, New York. Having been engaged in the independent management of the farm about three years, while out late at night with a company of his neighbors, he stopped for supper at a hotel near the village of Orleans in the town of Phelps, and while walking to the barn fell into a new well which was unstoned and uncurbed, and was found a few moments afterwards by his friends, quite dead. On the 10th of January, 1833, he married Prudence Maria, a daughter of Thomas Young of Marion, Wayne county, New York, who was born Aug. 10, 1811. After supplying a congregation in Ogden, and being extensively engaged in active service during the remarkable revivals in Western New York, he accepted (June, 1839,) a call from two congregations, which now became united, in Monroe, Michigan. During his pastorate there he was compelled by failing health to spend some time at Santa Cruz, West Indies, and in Tennessee. Unwilling still to encounter a residence in a northern climate, he now obtained a dismissal from his pastoral charge at Monroe, and accepted a call which had been repeatedly pressed upon him at Huntsville, Alabama. Here he remained four years (1844-8) when he removed to the First Presbyterian Church, of Carlisle, Cumberland county, Pennsylvania. He entered upon his labors there April 28, and was installed Oct. 13, 1848. Here he was a pastor for nearly twenty-eight years, and was dismissed, at his own earnest request, Oct. 25, 1875. Soon after his settlement at Carlisle he was invited by the Trustees of Dickinson College to fill for one year the professorship made vacant by the election of William H. Allen LL. D., to the Presidency of Girard College. In connection with Dr. Charles E. Blumenthal, then a professor in Dickinson College, he published a translation of Hase's Manual of Ecclesiastical History; various articles for the Presbyterian and Methodist Quarterly Reviews; a number of articles for McClintock's and Strong's Cyclopaedia; the Commentary on Second Corinthians in Dr. Shaff's American edition of Lange's Commentary on the Bible; a History of the First Presbyterian Church of Carlisle, and in 1879 a History of Cumberland County, Pa. He was especially active in efforts for the reunion of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, being a member of the National Convention of Presbyterians in Philadelphia in 1867, and of the General Assemblies in New York and Pittsburg when that union was effected, and was a member of the Joint Committee of Reconstruction by which arrangements were made for the reorganization of the Synods and Presbyteries of the reunited church. The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him in 1857 by the Board of Trustees of Dickinson College.

504. HALSEY ROGERS, the oldest son of Daniel W. and Rhoda Stewart Wing (265), was born at Sandy Hill, Washington county, New York, at that time one of the most active and flourishing villages between Albany and Montreal. At Fort Edward, where his father subsequently resided, he enjoyed the advantages of a good education and an early employment in an extensive business. At the age of sixteen he was sent to an academy which then possessed a high reputation at Lenox, Massachusetts. After a three-years' course he matriculated and remained a short time at Yale College, but soon transferred his studies to Middlebury College, Vermont, where he entered the Sophomore class, and graduated with the highest honors of his class Aug. 15, 1832. Soon after this he pursued the study of law in the office of Judge Samuel Cheever of Albany, and was admitted to practice at the October term of the Supreme Court in 1834. While pursuing these studies he served as an assistant District attorney for Albany county. About this time he was awarded a gold medal by the Young Men's Association of Albany for an essay of distinguished merit (which was afterwards printed by that body). In December following he was licensed as a Solicitor in Chancery, and removed to Brockport, Monroe county, New York. He remained there but a short time, and removed to Buffalo in the same State where he formed a partnership in business with Hon. Frederick P. Stevens. On the 31st of August, 1835, he married Harriet N. Walton of Montpelier, Vermont, who was born Jan. 14, 1815. In 1841 he removed to Glen's Falls, and was admitted as a Counsellor in the Supreme Court, and the following year as Counsellor in Chancery, and admitted to practice in the United States District Court of Northern New York, and also in the United States Circuit Court. In 1843-4 he acted as County Superintendent of Common Schools, and in 1845 he became the first Judge of the county of Warren. In 1851 he was induced to enter a firm called the Joint Lime Company, and the next year he and his brother-in-law, Lansing G. Taylor, purchased of Abraham Wing the 'Old Wing Mills' and the accompanying lumber interests. After Mr. Taylor's death, about 1856, he became the sole proprietor of this latter property, the care of which so absorbed his energies that he gradually withdrew from his legal practice. He was from the first a warm supporter of the Democratic party, an earnest friend and worker in the cause of temperance and a cordial promoter of education in every department. He was a regular attendant upon the ministrations of the Presbyterian Church, and contributed much every way to its support, especially in a season of embarrassment. At the outbreak of the Civil War he promptly identified himself with the movements for the National Union, and the record which he has left of munificent contributions, unwearied self-sacrifice and heroic devotion to his country is one of which his family may well be proud. His last appearance in public was at a general festival for the benefit of the poor. The disease to which he finally fell a victim had been for years preying upon his physical energies, and he finally yielded up his life to it Jan. 26, 1870. Numerous testimonials from various legal, educational and moral institutions of the vicinity indicate how much he was esteemed and his death lamented. Four children, with their mother, survive him.

Jackson in the United States Army, and distinguished himself for ability and bravery at the battle of Perryville and other engagements. After the war he returned to the practice of law at Louisville. In 1869 he was the candidate of the Republicans for State Treasurer, but as his party was much in the minority he was defeated, and the next year (1870) was appointed by General Grant United States Minister to Ecuador, being only 24 years of age, the youngest, it was said, who had ever received the office of foreign minister. The affairs of our government were in a very low state in the State to which he was accredited, but in a brief period he succeeded in counteracting foreign opposition, and was pronounced in an official document "the most popular minister of any country that had ever come to Ecuador." During his term and through his influence three treaties were negotiated, and all duties were removed from American machinery, in consequence of which Americans were able to undersell all other foreigners in the market. For some time before his death he was anxious to return home on account of some unfavorable indications of failure in health, but no serious alarm was felt by him or his friends up to the last day of his life. He awoke early on the morning of June 11th, 1874, at his home in Quito, with a sense of fulness in his head, and at six o'clock sprang from his bed with a cry of intense agony and at once fell dead. A post mortem examination revealed a profuse congestion and effusion of the brain, though he was in other respects in good health. His funeral was attended by the entire diplomatic corps, the government officials, the principal native citizens and foreign residents, and a guard of honor composed of military officers of high rank and a regiment of soldiers. His remains were interred in the Protestant burying ground, and by a singular law of the land were not allowed to be removed from there for two years. One thousand dollars were appropriated by Congress for their removal to Kentucky. They came by way of New York, were met at Louisville by the father, mother and widow, and were interred at Owensborough, his former home. A eulogy was pronounced in Congress upon his personal and diplomatic character by Hon. S. S. Cox of New York, and in his native State the expressions of esteem and sadness at his loss were of the most exalted kind. His most decided political opponents in the heat of their contest had pronounced him an honor to a party which they considered no honor to him, an orator of superior powers and eloquence, and the ablest Republican speaker in the State. His personal appearance was remarkably attractive, his manner peculiarly brilliant and effective, his culture much beyond that of most professional men, and his social qualities of the most winning nature. The universal feeling in his native State was that Kentucky had lost in him one of the most promising sons which she had ever sent into public life. 548. ELIZABETH GREGORY, a daughter of Dr. Joel Allis and M. Gregory Wing (292), married Arthur H. Root of Albany. She has been living for a number of years at Geneva, Ontario county, New York, where she now resides with her two sons and a daughter. The names of her children were: 1. Mary Wing, who died at about the age of twenty some years since; 2. Elizabeth Wing; 3. Lyman; and 4. George Webster.

549. WILLIAM GREGORY, a son of Dr. Joel Allis and M. Gregory Wing (292), was born in Albany, New York, April 10, 1826. His early studies were under the direction of Dr. T. Romeyn Beck until he entered the Sophomore class of Yale College, where he graduated in 1847, and continued for some time in the Philosophical Department of that Institution. His health being delicate, he sought a milder climate in 1849 at one of the Bahama Islands, and the next year in Louisiana and other South-western States. In 1852 he was induced to try the effect of a longer voyage by sea, and he sailed from New York on the 12th of July. On reaching Marseilles he found himself much prostrated by his sickness on shipboard, and he left for Smyrna in Asia Minor. There he seemed so much improved that he entertained hopes of a thorough restoration. Readily adapting himself to Oriental customs he continued to reside among the Greeks and Armenians for about a year, visiting meanwhile Ephesus, Alexandria and other places of historical interest. The journey from Smyrna to Constantinople he performed on horseback, and was in the latter city when the Turkish army left it for the Crimea. After several months there he came to Rome, where, allured by its antiquities, he remained for a year and then leisurely made the tour of Italy. He resided for some months in Florence and Paris, and traveled through Germany and England, but soon returned to Paris. His health was now so much improved that after an absence of nearly six years he returned to America. In December, 1858, he went to Geneva, Ontario county, New York, where a number of his friends resided, with a view of making it his home; but the disease which had threatened him from the very commencement of life began there to assume more alarming manifestations. Near the close of 1859 he went to Fort Leavenworth in Kansas, where he was overcome by violent hemorrhages from the lungs. Feeble as he was, however, he determined to push forward to what he supposed to be "the more vitalizing air of the plains of New Mexico." On a bed, in an ambulance, with a pair of mules and a Mexican driver, he joined a military train for Santa Fe, and for not less than ten weeks endured severe fatigue, constant travel and peril from hostile Indians. While crossing the spurs of the Rocky Mountains near Fort Union, at an elevation of more than six thousand feet, he was for three days exposed to a pelting rain. His former symptoms were now much aggravated, and he reached Santa Fe on the 30th of June in a dying condition. After several days of terrible suffering he died on the 5th of July, 1860, aged 34 years. His funeral, under the direction of Captain Wainwright of the army, was attended with every demonstration of respect to a gentleman and a stranger. He is said to have been a man of peculiar habits both of mind and life, since these were necessarily controlled by his condition. "He had a quick preception and a keen appreciation of the beautiful in nature and art, and from the resources with which his ample opportunities supplied him his mind had become well stored. His eye was well-skilled to observe whatever came before him of the beauties of natural scenery, of architecture, of paintings and of statuary, and his ear was delicately trained to enjoy the harmonies and melodies of music. His knowledge of languages and of English literature, his taste and skill in composition, his versatility and intelligence in conversation, and his warmth of friendship made him, wherever he went, the object of an affectionate and admiring interest." Notwithstanding his extreme feebleness, he seemed never to have known fear, and his life was one of more than ordinary adventure; and those who ministered to him in his last hours learned to love him, though he was too feeble after his arrival to speak to them more than a word."*

He survived the terrific explosion of the "Burnside Mine," but the undertaking failed and Henry was among the prisoners. After an eight months' confinement in the prisons of Columbia, S. The late Moses B. Sears, when writing in the Lewiston Journal of the descendants of Simeon Wing, says that this "father of the Wayne Wings" came to this town with his ten surviving children, that his grand children were seventy-six in number, and that the race has always been made up of stalwart, iron-framed, strong-minded, moral, industrious and long-lived people. He describes them as remarkably clear-minded thinkers for themselves, pinning their faith on no one's sleeve, giving character and tone from the earliest settlement to the manners, morals and religion of the inhabitants, and from their enterprise, industry and fecundity spreading over a large district of country.

Our account of this branch of the family may be appropriately closed by a description of the cemetery which has been laid out and constructed by these people for their own especial use. The description has been given us by G. J. Wing, to whose interest and diligence we are indebted for the materials used in the previous notices of the family in that region. "It is by the roadside, on a rise of ground overlooking the Wing Pond and a large portion of the town. It is one hundred and four feet square, with a slight inclination toward the rising sun and the lake. It is surrounded by a nice bankment wall built of split granite. The ground has been dug over three feet in depth, the stones have been all removed, and the entire area graded. In the centre is a circular plat, fourteen feet in diameter, on which stands a monument of cut granite which cost four hundred dollars. It is an octagon with a base four feet in diameter and sixteen inches in height, and having a wash around the upper edge. Upon this rests a plinth three feet two inches in diameter and twelve inches in height, with a tasteful moulding around the top. Above this is the die, which is two feet and four inches in diameter at the base and two feet in diameter at the top. Above this is the shaft eighteen inches in diameter at the bottom and rising seven feet, making the full height of the whole twelve feet. The lettering is in raised capitals. On the side of the die fronting the entrance is the name "Wing," and beneath it on the plinth the date "1871." On the other seven sides facing the lots of the seven sons of Simeon are their names in the following order, passing around to the right: Simeon, Allen, Ebenezer, Aaron, Moses, Thomas and William. Around the central plat is a circular walk five and a half feet wide, outside of which is a burial plat nine feet wide, divided into seven lots occupied by the seven sons of Simeon. Next is another circular walk six feet wide, beyond which is another circular burial plat, seventeen feet wide, designed for two tiers of graves for the descendants of the original Wing family. Outside of this plat is a third circular walk, seven feet wide, touching the four sides of the cemetery. There is likewise a walk from the entrance to the monument plat, cutting the other walks. The plats are graded one foot above the walks, and many of the lots are curbed with cut granite, the remainder being sodded at the edges. The walks are all gravelled, and kept clear of weeds and grass. There is also a lot in each corner of the cemetery outside the outer walk. The curbings of the lots next the walks are of cut granite, curved to the circle, fourteen inches wide and ten inches high. Upon this curbing rests the marble headstones giving the names of the descendants from the first family. Thus a stranger may easily trace the genealogy.

"It is a beautiful resting place for the dead. The cost of curbing one of the lots was a hundred and forty dollars, and that of walling and grading the cemetery, including the iron gateway, was a little over seven hundred dollars. There is a permanent fund of two hundred dollars deposited in the town treasury, the interest of which keeps the cemetery in repair. A row of maple trees runs along the roadside for thirty or forty rods, and another of elm runs around the other outside walls. Such a cemetery is indicative of the moral and religious sentiments of the people, and proves that they highly esteem the memory of their fathers."

OF UNCERTAIN LINEAGE.

There are some branches of the family whose connection with the original stock cannot be traced with certainty, and yet their records and traditions have been so far collected that it is desirable to have them preserved and presented in this history. They may thus meet the eye of some who possess the items needed for a more complete account, or the study of them under more favorable circumstances may suggest the fortunate conjecture which so often is successful in such inquiries.

I. JOSHUA OF SANDWICH AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

In Freeman's History of Cape Cod (Vol. II., p. 165, note 5,) a notice is given of a family in East Sandwich, from which, with some family records now in the possession of the descendants, the following account has been compiled. That they are descended from Ebenezer the grandson of Stephen, the traditions of the family make almost certain, but there is a single link wanting between him and the first in the following chain.

688. JOSHUA WING married Mary ——, and died 12th month, 14, 1790, in the 84th year of his age.

THEIR CHILDREN.

1. Sarah Divol, born Sept. 23, 1745, died Dec. 8, 1760.
2. Joseph, born July 25, 1748.
3. Elizabeth, born Dec. 20, 1750.
4. Pressbury, born June 26, 1754.

689-92. There were probably of the same family with the preceding: Ebenezer, who died 12th month, 24, 1737, in the 67th year of his age; Joseph, who died 2d month, 11, 1730, in the 21st year of his age; Elizabeth, who died 4th month, 21 1757, in the 86th year of her age; and John, who died 10th month, 28, 1720 in the 19th year of his age.

693. ELIZABETH, a daughter of Joshua and Mary Wing (688), married Joseph Freeman, Aug. 18, 1768, and went to the Province of Maine.

694. PRESSBURY, a son of Joshua and Mary Wing (688), married Hannah Swift, born 6th month, 1, 1752, resided in North Falmouth, Barnstable county, Mass., and died 2d month, 6, 1807, in the 53d year of his age. His wife survived him, and died 9th month, 6, 1816.

THEIR CHILDREN.

1. Joshua, born 5th month, 15, 1781.
2. Benjamin, born 8th month, 23, 1782.
3. Joseph, born 11th month, 25, 1784.
4. Silvanus, born 3d month, 5, 1789.*

695. JOSHUA, a son of Pressbury and Hannah Swift Wing (694), married Beulah Bowman of Falmouth, Barnstable county, Mass., born 7th month 20. 1776. He died 4th month, 5, 1861, aged 80, and his wife died 10th month, 18, 1867. Their children were: 1. Benjamin, who was born 4th month, 2, 1807, and died at Seipio, Cayuga county, New York, aged 28. 2. Ezra, who was born 11th month, 11, 1808, went to California, married Philena Nye of Sandwich, and had a daughter, Mary E., who married William Quinelle of New York City and died in 1873, leaving one daughter, Edna. 3. Hannah, who was born 9th month, 9, 1810, and died at Sandwich, aged 30. 4. Mary Shove, who was born 8th month, 23, 1812, and died 2d month, 22, 1830, at 81 years of age. 5. Pressbury, born 9th month, 15, 1815, a farmer near Spring Hill, and a preacher among the Orthodox Friends at Sandwich. His wife died in 1873, but he himself is now living at about 64 years of age. 6. Seth B., born 4th month, 15, 1818, who married Cordelia Phinney of Barnstable, Barnstable county, Mass., is a teacher and a farmer near Spring Hill, Sandwich, and has had Alvin, aged about 33 years, (who married Lizzie Turner of Boston), Charles H (who married Ida Baker), and Carrie (who died at the age of 8 years).

696. BENJAMIN, a son of Pressbury and Hannah S. Wing (694), was lost at sea with Joshua Crowell, probably 10th month, 9, 1804. His corpse was recognized on board of the Franklin at Plymouth, and "entered" in the Friends' burying ground at Falmouth about a week after the gale.

697. JOSEPH, a son of Pressbury and Hannah S. Wing (694), died 8th month, 26, 1811.

698. SILVANUS, a son of Pressbury and Hannah S. Wing (694), died 5th month, 3, 1847.

II. GILES WING AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

699. GILES WING lived for a while in Danby, Connecticut, and then in the eastern part of the State of New York, in St. Lawrence or Clinton county, or in the neighboring part of Vermont. He married first a lady of the Cornell family, and by her had five sons and three daughters, viz: John, Samuel, Joseph, Giles and Matthew, Katnarine, Elizabeth and Abigail. After the death of his first wife he married again and raised several children, among whom were Hiram and Orange. One of his wives was named Benlah. The names in this family bear a strong resemblance to those in the line of Joseph Wing of Dartmouth, but there are so many discrepancies that I have not ventured to put the family in connection with any branch which is in the General History.*

700. KATHARINE, a daughter of Giles and Cornell Wing (699), married Colonel Stephen Pettis of Alburgh Grand Isle county, Vermont. She had at least one daughter, who married her cousin, Giles N., the son of Matthew Wing (704).

*Mr. Stephen Wing of North Granville, Washington county, New York, writes that his great-grandfather was Joseph of Dartmouth, Mass., whose wife was Catharine; that this Joseph had two sons, Matthew and Daniel, and he thinks a third named Benjamin; that his grandfather Matthew married Elizabeth Sisson, moved to Danby, Rutland county, Vermont, the first year of the American Revolution, and had two sons, Giles and Matthew; that this Matthew (his father) married for his first wife Catharine Bullis (or Butler) of Manchester, Bennington county, Vermont, by whom he had one son Benjamin, and for his second wife Keziah Jenkins and had five sons, viz: John, Daniel, Stephen, Seneca and Anson; and that he himself (Stephen), has one son, John J. May it not be that this presents a hint by which the connection of Giles Wing can be conjectured with Joseph Wing of Dartmouth, through Matthew?

Pike county, Illinois, where he died in 1845, aged 62. He had eight children, viz: Phebe, Elizabeth, Stephen, Matthias, Amy, Charles, Joseph and Benjamin.

Having been overheated from some work on the farm at an early age, he was confined to his room by sickness, and deprived of the usual advantages of schools. At the age of seventeen he was apprenticed to a carriagemaker in Wethersfield, Connecticut, and there began to feel so much the want of education that he joined a class in an evening school, and by his diligence after severe labors during each day he acquired in seventeen evenings most of the rudiments taught in the common schools. When he became of age he went to Charleston, South Carolina, remained there about fifteen years and was very successful in the business for which he had prepared himself. In 1806 he married Elizabeth, the daughter of Caleb and Molly Walker Ormsbee of Rehoboth, R. I.,* and the next year he settled in Hartford, Connecticut, where he was the proprietor of an extensive establishment for manufacturing carriages for more than fifty years. He was one of the founders of the First Baptist Church of that city, became a communicant of it in 1821, and at one time was elected a deacon, though from extreme diffidence he declined the service. He refused when at the South, from conscientious motives, to own slaves, but he differed from most of his Northern friends in the measures they adopted against slavery, and yet so warm was his loyalty to the Union that had he lived he would have been an ardent supporter of the government in its recent conflict. He was a man of sincere piety, unquestionable integrity, genuine kindness to the poor and those struggling in business, and of excellent, sound judgment. He was an especial advocate of an educated ministry in the church of which he was a member, and was particularly opposed to the custom of wearing mourning weeds for deceased relatives. He died suddenly, while on a visit to his children in New York and Brooklyn, May 8, 1857. His wife died of cholera Oct. 22 1854, while on a visit at the house of her son-in-law, James W. Judd, who was then living at Brooklyn.
